Wachovia To Drop Ag Lending

Fate Of Many Farm Loans Unclear

DAVE LEFEVER

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Wachovia, one of the biggest ag lenders in the area, recently announced it will be getting out of the farm loan business in Pennsylvania and Delaware.

"We're going to be exiting what we call our agrifinance portfolio," said Jan Armfield, Wachovia regional president.

Low farm commodity prices and the high risk of agriculture loans are the main reasons Armfield gave for the divestment.

According to Armfield, the bulk of the bank's ag lending business in the area is made up of clients who generate $3 million to $15 million in annual revenues. That porfolio will be open to bids from other lending institutions to purchase either whole or piecemeal within the year.

"I would hope that we're out of (the porfolio) in six to 12 months," Armfield said.

Corn Harvest Aid Comes Through

GORDONVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The majority of the silage corn crop has been harvested in Lancaster and Chester counties, thanks to a coordinated aid effort put on by disaster workers and Penn State extension.

Tropical Storm Isabel had created a major dilemma for farmers when winds flattened cornfields throughout the area. Amish and other horse farmers were especially in need because "it was impossible to harvest a lot of the corn with a corn binder," said David Hoover, Corn Harvest Aid coordinator based in Gordonville.

Amish bishops decided to permit custom operators to harvest corn on Amish farms. The Corn Harvest Aid office set about making sure farmers in need were connected with custom harvest-

Agriculture, Environmental Leaders Launch Water Planning Act

LOGANVILLE (York Co.) — Stan Brown believes in smart water planning. He wants to be sure there will be enough of the essential commodity to go around in the future.

"For those of us in productive agriculture, there's one certainty and that's the uncertainty of weather," said the longtime orchardist and owner of Brown's Orchard and Farm Market in Loganville.

Throughout the past 10 years, droughts have been coming to the region on an almost regular basis. Increasing competition for water in many areas, including this part of southern York County, makes the need for water resource planning even more urgent.

And as Brown pointed out, "You can't manufacture artificial water."

Brown hosted top officials from the Pennsylvania departments of agriculture (PDA) and environmental protection (DEP) at his farm market Monday to address the topic of water and what a recently updated water plan will mean to farmers and other business operators.

Dennis Wolff, secretary of agriculture, and Kathleen McGinty, secretary of environmental protection, said the Water Resources Planning Act (Act 220 of 2002) will help farmers and others safeguard their water supply and protect the environment.

Under the Act, operations using more than 10,000 gallons of water per day, averaged over a 30-day period, are required to register their water withdrawal rates with DEP. For one example, a 200-cow dairy with replacement stock uses roughly 10,000 gallons a day, according to Wolff.

Preregistration forms, specifying whether users are required to register and whether they prefer registering by paper or on the DEP Website, are to be sub-

'Old-Fashioned' Just Might Be The Best Fashion

ROCK SPRINGS (Centre Co.) — Sometimes the old fashioned way is the best way.

New technologies are about every day but shoeing a horse still uses basic principles from before the 21st century.

Through the Equine Experience at the 2003 Ag Progress Days, horse owners and enthusiasts received a lesson in horse shoeing from longtime farrier Tom Siegenthaler.

In his presentation he explained the detailed process of shoeing. Twice an 18-year-old mare and dished out some advice to horse owners.

A 15-year veteran of the profession, Siegenthale took a 4-month farrier course at a horse shoeing school in Colorado but said he only learned the basics.

A guy told me once that it's all in your head and self experience will make you a farrier," he said. "I am always learning something new.

Siegenthale listed three reasons why a horse with proper trimming and shoeing may not be sound.

A lot times a horse's foot is naturally grow what it needs, so if a farrier sought and a horse will help protect the foot in that situation, he said.

If ranchers, girls, equine tractors, Siegenthal said wherever they are, jumping fences, pulling a buggy or riding trails.

ROCK SPRINGS (Centre Co.) — Horses are just as fit as they are about their weight as humans.

Want To Ride Trails? Learn To Ride Them Right

ROCK SPRINGS (Centre Co.) — Bud and Gwen Wills enjoy their mules and they intend to ensure that they are able to continue riding them.

The couple, who live in Clarion County with 7 mules, advocate for horsemen as volunteers for the Pennsylvania Equine Council. They want to keep public lands open to trail riders. To do so, they believe they must be easier on the land, be conservationists, ride properly and teach others to do the same.

They took a class in the mountains of Virginia and now teach other horse riders the Leave No Trace method of horse recreation.

At the 2003 Ag Progress Days Equine Experience, the couple shared their experience with the audience. Gwen said they are the only people north of South Caro-

Compared to Thursday, Monday sales were a full 1.00-2.00 higher, but only paved the way for an extremely active Tuesday sale. High Choice and Prime steers were as high as 104.00 on Tuesday, although all grades showed good advances as prices were as much as 5.00 higher. Granted, receipts were light, although numbers of good hard-fed cattle are becoming sparse across the country. They are so hard to find in fact, that the Nebraska direct feedyards moved their black-hided steers 4.00-7.00 higher from 97.00-98 00 on Tuesday, with pens up to 100.00, with dressed sales from 150.00-155.00, or 5.00-8.00 higher. The Board did all it could over the last couple of days to align with the higher cash trade, with two days of limit-up gains leaving the October spot live cattle contract at 92.82 The meat markets had no choice but to respond as well, with Choice cutouts over 161.00 again, and Select cuts over 129.00; all of which is over 3.00 higher. Holstein steers in Vintage were as high as 90.00, which are 4.00 higher, with the heifer run to light to test. Slaughter cows were 2.00-4.00 higher, with the cow carcass cutout value 2 66 higher on Tuesday There were not enough slaughter bulls to test the market The two-day run included an estimated 238 head of slaughter steers, 35 slaughter heifers, 401 slaughter cows, 12 slaughter bulls, and 37 head of feeder cattle.

The Vintage Sales Stables will be holding a special feeder cattle sale on Monday October the 13th, set to begin around 1:00 pm. There are already some nice black cattle consigned out of Maryland, with a fairly good overall selection expected

EDITOR'S NOTE. Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003

Milk production continues to rebound, especially in areas of the South. Milk imports into Florida are reduced by 20 loads compared to the week prior with supplies originating from MI, TX and parts of the Northeast Class I interest is mixed. While sales are reportedly lighter in the South, good movement persists in the North where bottled milk demand has not yet waned from August and September, when school's resumed session.

Fluid milk demand into manufacturing is steady with plants operating below and at capacity depending on available surplus milk volumes. Condensed skim interest is lighter than the week prior, especially into Class III operations where NDM is more price attractive.

Condensed skim prices are unchanged and production is steady.

Fluid cream supplies are increasing seasonally, especially in response to greater bottling activity in some areas. Demand for fluid cream into ice cream operations is also beginning to taper in areas, supporting the trend in increased supplies. Producers suspect that the seasonal flux in cream will be brief as production schedules are likely to gear up soon for holiday items such as cream cheese, egg nog, whipped cream and spreads. Cream prices are lower in response to decreases in the CME AA weekly average price. Multiples are not significantly reduced, deterring some cream movement into butter operations. Churn activity remains light yet improved compared to the week prior.

What are CLOUDS made of?

No matter what the color—gray, blue, or white—all clouds are made up of the same substance, water. Each cloud is made up of tiny drops of water that float. Alone, these drops of water are so small they are not visible. But when they collect together, they form a cloud you can see.

Most clouds float high in the air. Sometimes though, a cloud actually forms close to the ground When this happens, we call that cloud fog.

Herbs Aromatic Scents!

• ON THE GRILL
Sprinkle sage, rosemary, and basil on the coals The aroma is wonderful and helps flavor the meat.

• BY THE FIRE
Herbs may be tied in small bundles and placed by a fireplace Also, toss a few bundles into the fire Cinnamon sticks near the fire also give oft a festive fragrance

• IN THE WASH
Lavender and/or lemon verbena may be tied in an old nylon stocking and placed in the rinse cycle It can then be put in the dryer

Thought OF THE WEEK
The secret to contentment is knowing how to enjoy what you have EVER WONDER WHAT MAKES POPCORN POP?

Steam This may seem odd, especially since popcorn isn't wet So where does the steam come from? Inside each kernel there are drops of water so small that you can't see them When the corn gets hot, the water turns to steam, then pop! The steam bursts out, leaving a fluffy pile of white corn

OPINION

Trial Lawyer Industry Bigger Than Revenues Of Microsoft, Intel, Or Coca-Cola

Editor's note: We are a litigation-happy society, and this report proves it. This editorial is reprinted permission of the PMA Bulletin, published by the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, Sept. 29 issue. Website is www.pamanufacturers.org.

A new study of the U.S. lawsuit industry reveals that total tort costs now exceed $200 billion per year, or more than 2 percent of America's gross domestic product. The report, which was released last week by the Manhattan Institute for Policy Research, extrapolates that — assuming an average take of 19 percent in fees — the nation's trial lawyers rake in roughly $40 billion per year. For perspective, $40 billion is double the annual revenue of the Coca-Cola company and 150 percent of the annual revenues of Microsoft or Intel.

James R. Copeland, director of the institute's Center for Legal Policy, says in the study's introduction "while our figures on the size of the lawsuit industry are estimates — due to the industry's lack of transparency — those estimates are sparingly conservative."

Among the study's other findings:

• Even as the U.S. economy has stagnated and the stock market has plunged, the lawsuit industry's revenues have continued to skyrocket: in 2001, the last year for which data is available, U.S. tort costs grew by 14.3 percent.

• Over the last 30 years, tort costs grew at a compound annual rate of 9.1 percent; by comparison, the U.S. population grew by 1.1 percent annually, the consumer price index grew 5 percent annually, and the gross domestic product grew 7.6 percent annually during the same period.

The entire report is available online at www.TrialLawyersInc.com.

To Carefully Feed This Year's Corn Silage

Each harvest season it is important to evaluate the quality of your corn silage and adapt your total nutrition program to balance what is coming out of your silo. This is especially important this year, when many farmers who normally use corn binders harvested their corn with choppers. Many of these machines were equipped with kernel processors and it is important to understand that this will make very different silage than what you may have been feeding in the past.

Lancaster County dairy agent Beth Grove reports that silage that has been chopped with a processor on the harvester has up to 7 percent more energy than what is found in unprocessed silage. Studies have shown that cows fed processed silage may increase milk yield by as much as 1-3 pounds per day. With processed silage you are likely to see far fewer cobs left in the bunk and less grain in the manure of the herd. Hopefully, your processed silage was not cut too finely. Effective fiber is very important in a ration with processed silage.

Grove cautions that, depending on your herd's ration, you may need to cut back on energy from grain to prevent health problems. It may be necessary to adjust the amount of grain in the herd's diet when feeding processed silage; too much energy/grain in the diet can cause acidosis, cows going off-feed, and laminitis.

Grove reports one dairy farmer in Virginia who started feeding processed corn silage several years ago was able to cut 3-5 pounds of grain out of his 23,000 pound herd's ration. The total program included feeding more silage and roughage. Consult with your nutritionist or dairy extension agent for suggestions on feeding this new crop.

To Plant Cover Crops

Most farmers need to empty their manure storage units during the fall season. This means these crop nutrients are applied to cropland at a time of year when they are not needed by a growing crop. Therefore these nutrients are vulnerable to being lost to the environment because of soil erosion and leaching.

Winter cover crops are a valuable tool farmers can use to prevent this economic loss of valuable nutrients and prevent the environmental damage also caused. If you are applying manure to crop land this fall, plan on planting a small grain cover crop such as rye. The rye will take up the available nitrogen and hold it in the plant, preventing its loss to the water supply. If the rye is harvested the nutrients will be utilized as high quality feed. If the rye is killed or plowed in the spring, the nutrients will become available to the following crop.

The rye will also prevent nutrient loss by slowing soil erosion. Rye can be planted as late as November, but the earlier it is planted, the more nutrients it will take up and the more yield it will produce in the spring.

To Be Thankful For A Safe Harvest

The volunteers who manned the Corn Harvest Aid hot line and the Lancaster County farmers who were assisted by custom harvesters to bring in their storm-damaged crop would like to pass along their thanks to all who provided help.

As of this writing there have been no machinery-related injuries, which is something to be thankful for considering the stressful conditions during the harvest. The challenges included 24-hour operation, volunteers who do not regularly work together, sometimes muddy conditions, some operators with limited experience with large equipment, and a tangled crop.

One man was injured critically in a fall and he and his family will appreciate your thoughts and prayers.

Since the silage harvest is nearly finished, the Corn Harvest Aid hot line is no longer manned, but a voice mail is available if you have a request. The number for the voice mail is the same as the hot line, (717) 768-4670.

Quote Of The Week:

"The important thing is not to stop questioning. Curiosity has its own reason for existing. One cannot help but be in awe when he contemplates the mysteries of eternity, of life, of the marvelous structure of reality. It is enough if one tries merely to comprehend a little of this mystery every day. Never lose a holy curiosity."

Editor:

The Water Resources Planning Act requires the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to update Pennsylvania's State Water Plan to determine how much water we have, how much we use, and how much will be available in the future.

There is no cost to you to register or report your water usage.

Pennsylvania's water management plan had not been updated in more than 25 years, and did not address which areas had critical water needs. Since 1900, residential water use has increased from 5 gallons to 62 gallons per person per day. Total water use in Pennsylvania has experienced drought conditions during 8 of the past 10 years.

Act 220 requires all who withdraw or use 10,000 or more gallons of water per day to register and then periodically report their water withdrawal and usage to DEP. Users of fewer than 10,000 gallons per day are asked to register voluntarily, to help DEP get as complete of a water plan as possible.

Reporting your water usage does not establish water allocation or withdrawal requirements. It is merely for planning purposes, and does not give DEP authority to regulate, control or require permits for the withdrawal of water. Furthermore, the Act expressly prohibits any requirements for metering homeowner wells.

Public water suppliers, hydropower facilities and individuals who use or withdraw more than 50,000 gallons of water per day

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE RIGHT WAY TO GLORIFY GOD

Background Scripture:
1 Peter 2:11 through 5:142:10.
Devotional Reading:
Galatians 5:16-25.

It is difficult in our country for us to understand that historically the normal status of a Christian in society is that of an alien. That is how 1 Peter addresses his readers: "Beloved, I beseech you as aliens and exiles to abstain from the passions of the flesh that wage war against the soul" (2:11). Although they may not use the term "alien," other New Testament writers indicate that the Christian is most likely not to "fit in" comfortably in any society.

The reason is not that Christians enjoy being outsiders and take a perverted pleasure in being regarded as aliens and exiles, but that invariably the gospel proves offensive to the ways of the world. Normally, the only way for Christians to get around this barrier is to talk about the gospel, but not do it. I think that all too often our society molds Christians in their values and actions and not the other way around. In as much as we do not stick out like "sore thumbs" in our daily world, it is pretty accepting of us.

'Saving' God!

Christians in Africa and Asia, however, are much more aware that being a disciple of Jesus Christ means alienation. In both these continents, Christian values and behavior are much more likely to elicit condemnation, ostracism, and even violence. In Africa and Asia — the only places in the world today where Christianity is truly growing — being a Christian means sticking out, not blending in.

Some Christians believe that we are called to be in continual battle with our society. It is assumed that they must "save" God from heathens, agnostics, and atheists. Imagine worshiping and serving a god that has to be saved by his human followers! Is it arrogant to assume that human beings have the power to eject God from our schools, cities, and nations? And is it not equally arrogant to think that we have the power to put God back in those places? God does not need for us to go to court or take up arms to keep him in our society. Nor does God need for the government to let him into schools.

That is not to say, then, that the Christian is called to blend into our societies, but that the way of affecting the milieu in which we live is by making the gospel work for all to see. Too often we fail in making our mark in the communities, not because the dice are loaded against us, but because we don't live the gospel, either as individuals or as churches. We wouldn't have to worry and argue about the constitutional barrier between church and state if we really made our churches lighthouses instead of fortresses.

Glorifying God

How should we get the gospel across to the world around us? The writer of 1 Peter says, "Maintain good conduct among the Gentiles, so that in case they speak against you as wrongdoers, they may see your good deeds and glorify God on the day of visitation."

I'm not suggesting that Christians are not involved in doing "good deeds," but that usually these are eclipsed by other images of the church that are hardly complimentary to God. For Roman Catholics, the continuing headlines about abusive priests are what the "Gentile" public sees regarding Christianity. For Protestants, our squabbles over blessing homosexual unions probably outshines the good works our churches are performing. (Does the world conclude that Christianity is chiefly about sexuality?)

Yes, we are called by God to resist the values and behavior of our societies, but we need to resist in the right way: "Maintain good conduct among the Gentiles, so that in case they speak against you as wrongdoers, they may see your good deeds and glorify God...." (2:12) and "Above all hold unfailing your love for one another, since love covers a multitude of sins. Practice hospitality ungrudgingly to one another.... in order that in everything God may be glorified through Jesus Christ" (4:8,9,11).

Is that really the image that the world sees in us? Do we really glorify God?

Some early weaned lots have a slide of 50-1.00 per pound Early weaned pigs are under 19 days old Estimated lean value is projected to use slaughter weights with normal confinement feeding conditions Vaccination and health program values are not included but health status should be disclosed

Oct. 4, 2003
MARKETS REMAIN ROBUST

- Blocks holding.
- Butter firm.
- Processing slowing.

USDA announced a September Class III price of $14.30 per CWT, up $0.50 from the previous month. Wow, what a difference from the summer when Class III prices were stuck at $9 per CWT. The futures market indicates the higher milk prices could hold through October and then decline in November. Still, these are pretty good prices for dairy farmers.

Let's review the latest market information. For the week ending Oct. 3, the block cheese price at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange held steady at $1.60 per pound and barrel cheese averaged $1.5570 for the week. Grade AA butter averaged $1.1792 per pound. Western nonfat dry milk prices are still holding steady at $0.80 per CWT, as is the international price.

Butter prices will likely improve. There are lots of sales taking place to position inventories for the upcoming holiday season. Cumulative butter production through August is down 6.6 percent for the year. August butter inventory in cold storage is only up 12 percent from a year ago. The only thing holding back butter prices is a little inventory being offered to the market through the Commodity Credit Corporation. Again, I would expect butter prices to firm in the next few weeks.

Cheese prices are still pretty firm. Cumulative cheese production is even with a year ago, with American cheese slightly behind. Cheese inventories in August were behind year-ago levels (American cheese was 5 percent below year ago). Cheese prices are holding steady because the market perceives a shortage of milk components because of poor weather in some western states, mainly California. Forage conditions in the Northeast aren't particularly good and that is slowing milk production growth as well.

So where are we? The dairy futures at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange indicates that the Class III price will be $14.04 per CWT for October, and then decline to $12.64 per CWT in November and $11.75 by December. Clearly the market is expecting the milk supply to show some recovery by December, and that will pressure prices lower

SOY-BASED BIODIESEL.

You grow soybeans. Your soybean checkoff helped develop soy-based biodiesel. Government and industry studies show it's good for your engines, the environment, and U.S. farmers.

Farmers are the second-largest consumers of diesel fuel in the U.S. So when you request biodiesel, fuel suppliers will listen. Ask your fuel supplier to carry B2 - a two-percent blend of pure, ASTM D-6751 quality soy-based biodiesel. It's available throughout the United States, so why not ask for it and use it?

Using B2 on your farm supports the industry's growth, by increasing the number of suppliers for high-quality biodiesel fuel. And, a B2 blend provides increased lubricity for your engines, a boost in cetane, and reduced dependence on foreign oil

Studies show that if every farmer used B2, we could utilize more than 50 million bushels of soybeans per year - the combined 2001 annual soybean harvests of Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. Imagine the potential.

ASK FOR IT. PUMP IT. PROFIT.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
October 3, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending Oct. 3 — Total Receipts 411,800; last week 498,900; last year 400,700 Direct: 74,200; last week 85,100; last year 63,500. Video/Internet: 2,600; last week 74,700; last year 43,000 Auctions 335,000; last week 339,100, last year 294,200. This week's reported auction volume included 31 percent over 600 lbs and 44 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, yearling feeder cattle ended the week steady to firm. Major early-week auctions quoted lower prices, but demand improved later in the week and direct trading was steady to higher Buyers confidence in paying current price levels was rejuvenated by Wednesday's strong CME Futures close Also, on Thursday packers paid steady to 1.00 higher for slaughter cattle that not long ago would have been considered to be feeders. The better-grading Northern cattle continue to bring a premium with sales ranging from 93.00-94 00, compared to the Southern Plains 89.00 to mostly 90.00. However, movement was only moderate and the five major feeding areas sold around 25,000 head less than last week (which was also considered to be light). Several major packing plants are expected to work a 32 hour shift next week as packers are having a difficult time finding the Choice cattle that they want.

Calf prices were very uneven as markets ranged from sharply higher to sharply lower, depending on where the calves are at, what kind they are, and whether or not they are weaned and/or pre-conditioned.

The best calf demand is coming from farmer feeders in the Northern Plains and upper-Midwest. Prices were firm to as much as 4.00 higher on ranch calves in Wyoming and the Dakotas. Near the winter wheat regions, calves sold steady to 3.00 lower with un-weaned fleshy bawlers taking the brunt of the weakness. However, feather-weight calves weighing under 450 lbs were as much as 5.00 higher (and very few of these would have been weaned) Southeastern regions posted trends that ranged from 3.00 higher to 4.00 lower as receipts have been heavy but are starting to taper off. Backgrounders that are taking delivery on these calves are reporting significant health problems. Buyers are reporting that some calf orders are being pulled until the cowboys on the other end catch up long enough to holster their pistol-grip syringes Calf doctoring attire is ranging from shorts and a tank-top to insulated coveralls, depending on what time of day the work is done. These temperature swings can take their toll on even the healthiest cattle.

Champions Fetch Good Prices At New Holland Fair Sale

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Swine numbers were down quite a bit, owing to the career retirement of 4-H members from last year, but prices remained high late last week at the annual New Holland Farmers' Fair livestock sale.

Auctioneer Alan Diffenbach, of A&C Diffenbach Auction, New Holland, took the bids on 19 market sheep and 22 hogs. (Normally the fair sale draws 30 or more hogs — last year, the sale included 31 hogs.)

Following are the results of the sale, in photo format.

Fisher And Thompson To Exhibit At 2003 Farm Show

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — Fisher and Thompson, Inc. a Leola-based dairy service company, will be exhibiting for the first time at the 2004 Farm Show. Plans are being made on what their exhibit will feature.

"In light of the tradition of the Farm Show, we wanted to support it," said Amos Fisher, Fisher and Thompson sales manager, "the exhibition is being revived."

In the past, they have lent their support to Westfalia/ Surge exhibit at the Farm Show, however, by organizing their own exhibit, they will be able to feature their line of Westfalia/Surge milking equipment, dairy supplies, and services.

"In light of the dairy economy this year, if we could get more exposure with the market conditions," said Fisher, "we could show people what we can offer."

Fisher and Thompson, Inc. have a service area including central and southeastern Pennsylvania, northern Maryland, Delaware, and southern New Jersey.

Fisher and Thompson was established in July 1983, starting off as a full service and repair company for dairy equipment and milking systems. They also sold a small line of chemicals and animal health supplies.

Today, they continue to serve as a full service and full line company. Fisher and Thompson services include seven supply route services, cooling and dairy equipment repairs, dairy equipment sales and installation, and dairy equipment analysis.

They have locations in Chambersburg, Martinsburg, Mifflintown, and Belleville.

Water Planning Act

mitted to the DEP by Oct. 30.

The DEP will mail out final registration forms by Dec. 31. These will be due March 16, 2004.

There are no user fees involved in registering.

For operators using less than 50,000 gallons of water per day, no water meters are required. DEP will provide formulas to enable farmers to estimate water useage on their own operation.

Water Planning Act Launched

To get a better picture of the state's water needs and to avoid future fights over water, secretaries Wolff and McGinty urged all farmers to register their water — even those using less than 10,000 gallons per day.

"This is about finding out which areas have critical water needs so we can make sure we have the best system in place for resource management and conservation," Wolff said.

"Act 220 will certainly benefit farmers in case a shortage of water occurs," he said. "Many people might think the drought is over with all the rains we've had this past year, but if you look at the past 10 years, we're in a water deficit."

McGinty said DEP will use Act 220 for water resources planning only. The Act does not establish water allocation or withdrawal requirements, and does not give DEP authority to regulate, control, or require permits for water withdrawal. It also prohibits any requirements for metering homeowner wells.

According to McGinty, local officials will be able to use the information gathered under Act 220 to consider how much water is being used and how much is still available, and limit development before water use and water quality conflicts arise.

"When that tug and pull over water resources comes to push and shove — and it will," McGinty said, "... water will be safeguarded for the use of agriculture."

Stan Brown first came to the farm here in 1948. Brown, his wife Nona, and their son Scott and his family own and manage the orchard and farm market. They grow about 125 acres of tree fruits and 50 acres of other produce, including sweet corn and pumpkins. Neighboring farmers provide much of the produce sold in the store.

Beside homegrown fruit and local produce, the diversified market also includes a large baked goods section, a deli, gift shop, and children's section.

Stan said the operation draws water from two spring- and run-off-fed ponds for some irrigation purposes, but the supply is limited.

"We cannot irrigate most of our lands," he said.

This year's plentiful rainfall helped produce a crop of big, solid apples.

"That's what the water did," Brown said of the good crop. The apples weathered Tropical Storm Isabel fairly well, though many leaning trees need to be straightened from the effect of the storm winds.

"Working together, we can preserve this precious commodity (water) for generations to come," Brown said, speaking in support of Act 220.

Ag organizations supporting Act 220 include the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, PennAg Industries, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, Pennsylvania Farmers Union, Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association, Pennsylvania Grange, and Wenger Feeds.

A statewide water resources committee has been created under Act 220 to oversee the water plan. The Act also creates six regional committees, made up of business, agriculture, local government, and environmental representatives.

According to a DEP fact sheet, the state's water plan had not been updated for more than 25 years prior to Act 220. The old plan fails to identify which areas have critical water needs, according to the fact sheet.

Since 1900, residential use of water has increased from 5 gallons to 62 gallons per person per day. DEP estimates total water use in Pennsylvania is about 10 billion gallons per day.

For more information, or to download registration forms, visit the Pennsylvania PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, keyword: "DEP Water Management."

Leaders of Pennsylvania's departments of agriculture and environmental protection meet at Brown's Orchard and Farm Market this week to help launch a new water plan for the state. Corn Harvest Aid Comes Through

Hoover said about 20 corn choppers came into the area from places as far away as Perry County to assist. Local harvesters also stepped in to help.

"It has really worked," Hoover said Wednesday morning. "The majority of the (silage corn) is cut. The (phone) lines have been very quiet this morning."

Hoover said there have been some complaints that half the yield was left in the field in certain cases. He estimated that many fields had lesser losses — in the 20-30 percent range.

Some requests are coming in for combines, but the demand is much less than the call for choppers earlier, he said. A few Amish are having high moisture corn put into forage bags, but many are not equipped to handle it.

Hoover said the office opened up Sept. 22, four days after Isabel hit. Some custom harvesters had received 50 to 60 phone calls from farmers needing help, he said.

The Corn Harvest Aid office was able to play a part in reducing crop losses by connecting farmers with harvesters to get the work done in a timely manner. An Amish fund, along with some assistance from Mennonite Disaster Service, was used to finance the aid operation and guarantee payment to harvesters.

Safety during custom harvesting on these farms is a concern because of unfamilar equipment and because of the potential buildup of deadly silage gases, Hoover pointed out.

Having silos filled in several hours compared to several days or a week can result in a much higher concentration of gases. Harvesting the silage too wet or too dry also contributes to the danger, he said.

The Corn Harvest Aid office worked with Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension director, in spreading the word.

Ressler said that a few fields in the county are near a total loss. However, many fields yielded well as long as harvesters went at about half their normal pace and were willing to making some head adjustments on the machine.

"It went better than we had feared," Ressler said.

Beside yield losses, one concern is volunteer corn growing up in fields next year, he noted.

For farmers who have livestock and the time to put up extra fencing, turning animals in to harvest the down corn is an option, Ressler said.

particularly local government.

"There are a lot of decisions (local governments) have to make," said Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Dennis Wolff. "We understand that there is a lot of misunderstanding on the different programs. This is a way we could bring the right people together, present information on these issues, and let them (local officials) ask whatever questions they would like to ask."

Wolff also stressed that as the gap between the farming community and the general public increases, events such as this workshop provide an opportunity for local officials and educators to gain an understanding of Pennsylvania agriculture.

"It's all about education and being proactive," said Wolff, "just trying to make information available. We are trying to educate the public on them (issues and programs), how they work, and how they interact."

Issues discussed ranged from right-to-farm laws, municipality planning codes, agriculture nuisance issues, farmland preservation, water use, agriculture education, and nutrient management.

Wachovia To Drop Ag

Some large agribusiness clients with yearly revenues of more than $15 million will remain with Wachovia, Armfield said.

But what will happen with loans to farmer clients generating less than $3 million in annual sales seems a lot less clear.

"We're really going to look at them on a case-by-case basis," said Barbara Nate, Wachovia communications director in Delaware.

To put $3 million in perspective, a dairy farm with average production would need about 1,000 cows to generate milk sales of $3 million in a year, at a milk price of $13 per hundredweight.

According to Armfield, term loans may continue to be serviced by Wachovia until they are paid off, or the loans may undergo "ordinary refinancing." The smaller loans could also be sold to another lending institution.

At any rate, Wachovia "expects to do very little additional business with smaller agribusinesses," Armfield said.

Regarding farm producers with Wachovia loans, "we don't want to have any kind of a knee-jerk reaction," she said, adding that the company will not ask for "quick refinancing."

Armfield was not able to provide a dollar figure on the loans outstanding.

In Pennsylvania, the southeast area makes up the "heart" of Wachovia's ag dealings. A number of producers farther west, including those in Blair and Franklin counties as well as others scattered around the state, also have loans through Wachovia, which merged with First Union Bank in 2001.

The strong ag lending department at the bank was developed over the last quarter century.

Darvin Boyd retired this past March from heading up the agri-finance department at the First Union/Wachovia branch in Lancaster.

Beginning in 1976, at what was then National Central Bank, Boyd built the ag lending department from $13 million to $500 million in outstanding loans by the time he retired this spring.

Throughout those years, the bank went through numerous mergers, finally becoming First Union in 1998 and then merging with Wachovia in 2001.

Boyd spoke Thursday with Lancaster Farming about the bank's divestment from ag lending.

"It is sobering that the fourth largest bank in the country, with over $350 billion in assets, has decided it is not in their best interest to be committed to the ag community and ag industry in the Pennsylvania and Delaware marketplace," Boyd said.

Bank leaders tend to compare returns from agriculture with other types of business, according to Boyd. But farming has certain features that make it different, he pointed out.

"Commodity price swings and the related risk are an inherent part of ag lending," he said.

Boyd acknowledged that the last several years have been more challenging than most because markets were depressed for the main commodities produced in the area.

But 2003 brought signs of recovery. For example, milk prices are beginning to climb and commercial egg producers made significant profits this year. Auction beef prices continue to soar to record levels.

Boyd said he is hopeful that the existing ag infrastructure will be able to step in and continue to back farmers and agribusinesses.

Bob Zook, ag lender at Ephrata National bank, agreed that there are a number of banks in the area still interested in funding agriculture.

"Obviously, there's one less lender to provide capital for agriculture," Zook said of Wachovia's decision. "I look at it first as an opportunity."

Zook said relatively small banks such as Ephrata National should continue to grow in the ag finance department. Even though the Wachovia portfolio will need to be purchased by a larger lending institution, he said, smaller lenders will be able to pick up some of Wachovia's individual loans.

Wachovia Corporation, based in Charlotte, N.C., offers financial services in 11 Eastern states and Washington, D.C. The company does additional business in 48 states and internationally. Total assets are $364 billion.

Calls this week to the Lancaster First Union/Wachovia office on the subject of ag lending were directed to the Delaware communications office and Armfield.

Arabian Horse Judging At KILE

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 90 students from 20 area schools filled five sections of the Equine Arena on Monday, Oct. 6, during the 12th Annual Keystone Arabian Horse Judging Contest at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

Youth were instructed to sit at least one seat and row apart from one another to insure the contest's validity. Prior to the contest, judging cards and test sheets were passed out to each student as they anxiously awaited their first class of horses.

KILE sponsors the judging contest, which offers area 4-H youth a unique opportunity in animal evaluation. Jeff Morse, an agriculture education teacher at Littlestown High School, has been overseeing the youth judging contest for five years. "It's a great introduction to horse judging. For kids who have never judged before, no reasons are necessary, which makes it easier for them."

Students may enter the contest individually or as a team. Monetary prizes are awarded to the top ten individuals and ribbons are given to the top five teams. During the contest, students first complete a written exam, which consists of matching, multiple choice and essay questions. Horse anatomy and general knowledge topics are covered.

After the contest, points were added and tests were scored. The following winners were selected: first place, BJ Dabbler, York 4-H; second, Brandy Lower, Dauphin 4-H; and third, Stacey Fague, Danville 4-H.

Schools represented included Littlestown, Biglerville, Line Mountain, Bermudia, York, Northern York, Dauphin, Northern Bedford, Perry, Gettyburg, Big Spring, Kennard-Dale, and Dover.

Sales of slaughter cattle on a national basis for negotiated cash trades totaled 167,700 head through 10:00 a.m Friday Last week's full count totaled a moderate 188,800 head.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — 4-H and FFA members look forward to showing their prized dairy beef and beef cattle at the Manheim Community Farm Show.

With a year of time and effort invested into their projects, show day marks a payoff. For others, it is a way to get involved in the fair.

For Stephanie Fiester, 20, of Manheim, she was in search of a way to become more involved. After serving as the Manheim Community Farm Show Queen, Fiester, who traditionally shows horses, found her niche by raising a dairy beef steer.

"I wanted to try something different," said Fiester, "and horses were not a part of the fair."

In her second year showing, Fiester was selected as the reserve grand champion dairy beef steer and the champion of the showmanship contest.

This Manheim FFA member applied everything she learned in her first year to help her achieve her success. From choosing a larger steer to raise this year to taking pointers from her fellow showman, she worked to be better prepared for this show.

A junior at Penn State, Fiester plans to use her premium and pending sale earnings to pay for this year's college expenses.

Cassandra Shenk, 17, Mount Joy, was named the grand champion in the dairy beef show with her steer named Odis.

In the beef show, Seth Reifsnyder was selected as grand champion with his light heavyweight division winner, Zeb.

Reifsnyder said, "It feels good." He has enjoyed his first year with a 4-H beef project and is ready to begin the search for next year's project. Seth plans to use his show and sale earnings to purchase it.

The reserve grand champion steer was exhibited by Adam Zurin of Mount Joy.

NASS
Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Editor's note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

NATIONAL PESTICIDE INITIATIVE

Growers, this is your chance to help ensure that decisions about pesticide restrictions are based on actual usage rates, not simply maximum label rates. The Food Quality Protection Act of 1996 initiated much higher food safety standards related to pesticide residues. Without actual application rates from growers, the EPA may assume farmers use far more pesticides than they actually do.

A recent example is when US-Apple used this and other information to preserve the use of azinphos-methyl (Guthion) to control insects and mites. Similarly, the National Potato Council was also able to preserve the use of methamidophos (Monitor) to control virus-carrying aphids and triphenyltin hydorzide (TPTH, Supertin) for late blight.

Corn, barley, potato, apple, and peach growers may soon be asked for their help in determining the actual application rates of pesticides and other pest management practices used on these crops. The nationwide study is coordinated by USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service.

Here in Pennsylvania, the studies are conducted as a cooperative effort between the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service and the Pesticide Education Program of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Other Ag Statistics state offices are also conducting these surveys for selected crops important to their state.

About 800 growers in Pennsylvania will get a letter in the mail that explains the studies. Trained interviewers will then contact the selected operators to set up a meeting time that is convenient for the grower.

The interview typically lasts about an hour. Having fertilizer and pesticide records on hand will help to simplify the interview.

In Pennsylvania, growers will be able to earn one core pesticide credit for responding to the survey.

Crop Forecasts

The Sept. 1 crop forecasts are in! Based on grower responses to the September Ag Yield Survey, Pennsylvania yields of grain corn and soybeans are expected to approach the high levels of 2000.

Corn yields, as of Sept. 1, are forecast at 122 bushels per acre, 54 bushels above last year's drought-reduced levels and up 7 bushels from last month's forecast. If realized, this yield forecast is only 5 bushels less than the 2000 record high yield in Pennsylvania. At 109.8 million bushels for 2003, Pennsylvania grain corn production is expected to be 86 percent above last year but 20 percent less than 2000, when 180,000 more acres were harvested for grain.

Nationally, corn production is forecast at 9.94 billion bushels, down 1 percent from last month but 10 percent above 2002. Based on Sept. 1 conditions, yields are expected to average 138.5 bushels. If realized, both the yield and production would be the second largest on record behind 1994 levels. With hot and dry conditions, yield expectations in the Great Plains and northern Corn Belt have deteriorated since Aug. 1. Meanwhile, adequate moisture and generally favorable conditions in the southeast and Atlantic Coastal states have increased yield forecasts in the region.

Soybean yield is still forecast at 40 bushels per acre, the same as the Aug. 1 forecast. September yield is 14 bushels above last year and only 3 bushels below 2000, our most recent high yield.

Pennsylvania production is forecast at 14.6 million bushels, or 60 percent above last year and 12 percent below 2000. Nationally, soybean production is forecast at 2.64 billion bushels, down 8 percent from the August forecast and 3 percent below 2002. Based on Sept. 1 conditions, yields are expected to average 36.4 bushels, down 3 bushels from last month. If realized, this would be the lowest production since 1996.

Pennsylvania-type tobacco expected production is 5.04 million pounds from 2,400 acres. This production is 14 percent above last year from 300 additional acres harvested. The 2003 yield forecast is 2,100 pounds per acre, same as last year.

Maryland-type tobacco expected production is 2.47 million pounds from 1,300 acres. This production is 3 percent above last year from the same acres harvested. The 2003 yield forecast is 1,900 pounds per acre, 50 pounds above last year. (There is no forecast for Vector-type tobacco.)

Sweet corn contracted production (for processing) is expected to be 6,360 tons in Pennsylvania, 5 percent below last year. This decline is due to harvested acres decreasing from 1,400 last year to 1,200 acres. Meanwhile, yields are forecast to increase from 4.76 tons last year to 5.3 tons per acre in 2003.

Snap bean contracted production (for processing) is expected to be 24,360 tons in Pennsylvania, 20 percent above last year. The increase is due to acres harvested growing from 7,500 acres last year to 8,400 acres. Yield is also expected to increase from 2.71 tons last year to 2.90 tons in 2003.

FARM, COMMUNITY SUSTAINABILITY ARE LINKED
Winifred McGee
Lebanon County
Extension Director

Winifred McGee

Did you ever dream about how your farm could be different? If only you had the time? If only you had the equipment? If only you had the money? If this rings a bell with you, there may be a state loan program that will make your dreams a reality.

For some time, the Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development (DCED) has offered loan programs for equipment, land, and working capital — but agricultural businesses were not often eligible, because the dollars were tied to creating jobs. As many people know, farmers can use new equipment, add land, or diversify production without creating additional jobs.

However, within the last year, the rules have changed to exempt farmers from the job creation/ retention clause. This change opened the Machinery and Equipment Loan Fund (MELF) or the Small Business First loan program to farmers and agricultural enterprises.

The first program, MELF, is a source of low-interest loans for 50 percent of the cost (up to $500,000) of purchasing machinery and equipment that is directly related to the farm operations. The costs covered by MELF include purchasing, delivery, and installation. Interest rates are 3 percent to 5 percent, and the term of a loan will be 7 years or the life of the machinery or equipment, whichever is less. A lien position on the machinery or equipment serves as the collateral in many cases.

The second source of funding, the Small Business First (SBF) loan program, is designed to provide low-interest loan financing for a portion of costs of land, buildings, machinery, and equipment, and working capital to businesses unable to finance these projects with the usual bank financing and equity. Agricultural enterprises — businesses that make value-added products from agricultural commodities, and agricultural producers (those who produce, harvest or prepare for market poultry, livestock, field crops, timber, flowers, fruits, vegetables, shrubs, fish, and plants grown in water) — are eligible, as long as they have more than 10 contiguous acres of land or have an anticipated yearly gross of at least $10,000 from farming operations.

SBF loans for land, buildings, machinery and equipment can be up to $200,000 or 50 percent of the eligible project cost (whichever is less). Working capital loans are limited to $100,000 or 50 percent or the project. Like MELF, SBF requires that funds from other sources must be at least half of the cost of the project. The interest rate for standard SBF loans is 3.75 percent — but agricultural loans to farms in natural disaster areas may qualify for 2-percent loans.

To apply for a MELF or SBF loan, contact DCED at (800) 379-7448, or through their Website at www.inventpa.com . You may also contact your local economic development agency. They will supply you with a Single Application for Financial Assistance — a seven-page strategic business plan. Filling it out will help you put your dream down on paper — the first step to realizing your dream. Of course, not all ideas will work out, but MELF and SBF may help make your "if only" into a "why not?"

Pa. Department Of Agriculture Hosts 1,500 Children For Farm-City Day

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) hosted 1,500 school children from the central Pennsylvania region at the state Farm Show Complex during the seventh annual Farm-City Day celebration.

"Agriculture is Pennsylvania's leading economic enterprise. Farm City Day provides children with an opportunity to experience agriculture and learn how it impacts their daily lives," said Agriculture Secretary Dennis C Wolff. "We have put together a program that will keep children entertained while they learn about livestock, dairy, horticulture, aquaculture, Pennsylvania-grown foods, and other aspects of production agriculture."

Children from schools in Dauphin, Cumberland, York, Perry, and Clinton counties witnessed an active beehive and the hatching of baby chicks in addition to a livestock petting zoo. They also tasted honey, milk products, popcorn, candy apples and cotton candy, and sampled Pennsylvania snack foods.

The Agriculture Education Lab was open for tours, in addition to the Wood Mobile and Bug Mobile. The Farm Safety Robot also entertained. Amusement rides were offered.

More than 12,000 children have attended Farm City Day since the Department of Agriculture began hosting it in 1997.

Study Broadens Knowledge Of Farm Conservation Easements

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new study on agricultural easement programs finds that use of this land conservation tool is most prevalent in suburban and semi-rural parts of major metropolitan areas-counties with populations of more than 100,000 that have been experiencing rapid population growth for years.

"A National View of Agricultural Easement Programs" is the most in-depth and comprehensive analysis of agricultural easement programs undertaken in the United States. This report, the first in a series to be issued from the study, profiles 46 agricultural easement programs in 15 states-nearly half of all publicly funded farmland protection programs in the nation.

The 46 programs studied have spent a total of $1.8 billion to protect 887,000 acres on 5,800 farms. The study was done by American Farmland Trust and the Agricultural Issues Center, University of California, in collaboration with Farm Foundation.

"This study reveals a diversity of ways that farm conservation easement programs are conceived, managed and funded," said project director Alvin D. Sokolow, University of California-Davis. "What all of the programs have in common, however, is that they were launched by a show of strong public support for farmland protection. This common conviction supported the bond issues, revenue measures and public deliberations needed to establish and maintain the programs."

Agricultural easements allow landowners to sell the development rights on their farms to government or nonprofit organizations in exchange for agreeing to keep the land permanently available for agriculture. The use of farm easements has grown exponentially since the 1970s; today twenty-six states have at least one publicly funded easement program at the state or local level.

One interesting finding was that the cost of agricultural easements-generally the difference between the market and agricultural values of the land-varies tremendously. "The per acre cost of individual easement transactions ranges from a few hundred dollars in rural areas, to close to $100,000 in a few metropolitan locations with intense development pressure," Sokolow explained.

Although the average price of easements for all 46 programs studied was approximately $2,000 per acre, the report explains that easements are often worth far more than their price tags. "Donations by landowners for tax benefits can help lower the price of easements and sweeten the deal for communities wishing to protect farmland," said Julia Freedgood, director of American Farmland Trust's Technical Assistance Services.

The report, "A National View of Agricultural Easement Programs," along with maps of land protected through most of the 46 programs studied, is available at www.farmland.org and www.farmfoundation.org. Additional reports from the study will address acquisition strategies, land use planning and the impacts and effectiveness of easement programs.

'Cook's Miss Attitude' At First Annual Sale

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — "The bidding starts at $2,000," said auctioneer John Spiker at the first annual Keystone of Excellence Simmental Sale.

The cattle auction was conducted in the Sale Arena of the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex on Sunday. Bidding ranged from $225 for embryos of KCF Lorin 6G, exhibited by J & J Farms, to $3,900 for a polled purebred, Cook's Miss Attitude, exhibited by John W. Cook.

Cook's Miss Attitude was noted as the sale feature. Her dam was grand champion female at the 2000 Keystone International Livestock Exhibition (KILE) at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, and won her division at the American Royal in Kansas City.

The show and sale were sponsored by the Pennsylvania Simmental Association. Joe Messick, association president, kicked off the sale when he said, "We have an impressive lineup of cattle to be sold today. They have proven to be excellent at the state, national and international shows. I'm positive that they can take each of us to that level."

Ten embryos, four bred females, 21 open heifers, and two bulls were sold at the event.

Raw Milk Information Meeting Oct. 20

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) announces a day-long symposium for concerned producers who sell, or would like to sell, raw milk and raw milk products directly to the public.

This informational gathering will be Monday, Oct. 20, at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. Doors open at 8 a.m. and activities are scheduled to begin promptly at 9 a.m. In addition to farmers, others attending will include representatives of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, as well as interested consumers and activists.

The morning session will feature three speakers — Tim Wightman, Lee Dexter, and Mark McAfee — who will share their creative approaches to complex raw milk sales regulations. Hailing from Wisconsin, Texas, and California respectively, these three will weave together their unique stories with a common thread: finding effective responses to the growing public demand for fresh, unpasteurized dairy products. After lunch, a question-and-answer panel with speakers and other invited guests will be followed by a short planning and strategy session.

A requested donation of $10 per adult and $5 per child will be collected at the door. Lunch is potluck style. Sandwiches will be provided — please bring a non-meat dish to share.

Sometimes You Need a Spreader Built Like A Tank

When spreading stockpiled lime, for example. The Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreader is likely the most powerful spreader of its kind on the market today. You see, we've been building them since 1945, and farmers are still using Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreaders they've had for 20, even 30 years. Our special drag chain is 4 times stronger than stainless steel, and handles frozen and heavy stockpiled lime with ease. Plus for spreading compost, composted sludge, poultry litter and certain fertilizers, the WLS is without equal for sheer volume spreading.

Cut your fertilizer bill by liberating nutrients tied up by acid soil.

are generally required to provide metered information. The majority of agricultural water users are not expected to exceed that amount and will be given alternate methods to estimate water use and withdrawal.

Because of the rapid expansion of businesses and new housing into rural areas, a stress has been put on both surface and ground water supplies. Local officials will now be able to consider how much water is being used and how much is still available, and limit development before water-use and water-quality conflicts arise.

The registration process has begun, and you must register by March 16, 2004 for existing withdrawals or uses of water. Withdrawals or uses developed after Feb. 16, 2004, must be registered within 30 days of development.

After you register, water use data will be compiled and studied by statewide and regional water resources committees. These committees consist of representatives of business and industry, agriculture and local government and environmental interests. This group will be responsible for identifying existing and potential water-use conflicts and water-quality issues that may occur, and address these issues before they become problems.

Producers will receive a pre-registration packet in the mail that will explain the registration process, and include suggestions for estimating water usage. If you have any questions please contact the Act 220 Hotline at (888) 457-6653.

Camp Hill

Editor:

Legislation to be considered this week by a General Assembly committee allowing state-owned farmland in Warren County to be used for a shopping mall would weaken Pennsylvania's policy for farmland preservation, according to the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

At issue are 29 acres of prime farmland located at Warren State Hospital which are being farmed. Last year the Warren County Commissioners approved an agreement whereby the state-owned land would be sold to a commercial developer along with two other land parcels. The transaction requires passage of House Bill 66, which would transfer ownership of the land to Warren County without an agricultural use restriction. The measure was scheduled to be considered by the House State Government Committee on Wednesday, Oct. 8.

Passage of House Bill 66 would establish a perilous precedent and weaken Pennsylvania's long-standing public policy that farmland owned by the commonwealth be restricted for agricultural use to the fullest extent possible if sold or transferred. At least one farm family who is actively using much of the land would be gravely affected by the action. So in this instance, not only is the future of state-owned farmland at risk, but the future of the farm family as well.

Bloomsburg Fair Hosts Record-Breaking Livestock Sale

CHARLENE M. SHUPP
Lancaster Farming Staff

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — The show tent at the 2003 Bloomsburg Fair was filled to capacity as 4-H and FFA supporters bid on the 108 beef, sheep, and swine available for auction.

A record was set in the market lamb sale. For Jordan Schrock of Bloomsburg, owner of the grand champion market lamb, the sale was an exciting one. The lamb set a sale record at $9.25 per pound, purchased by Berger Sanitation Service, Muncy. In 2001, Jordan was the owner of the previous record-breaking sale at $5.50 per pound.

Colby Williamson of Cogan Station sold his champion market swine for $3.20 per pound at the 2003 Livestock Sale.

In reaction to the final bid, Jordan was amazed at what happened. He said, "I did not think I was hearing (the auctioneer) right. I was shocked."

This four-year 4-H member is looking forward to investing her sale earnings into another 4-H project, a new horse. Outside of showing sheep and horses in 4-H, Jordan also enjoys participating in a 4-H rabbit project.

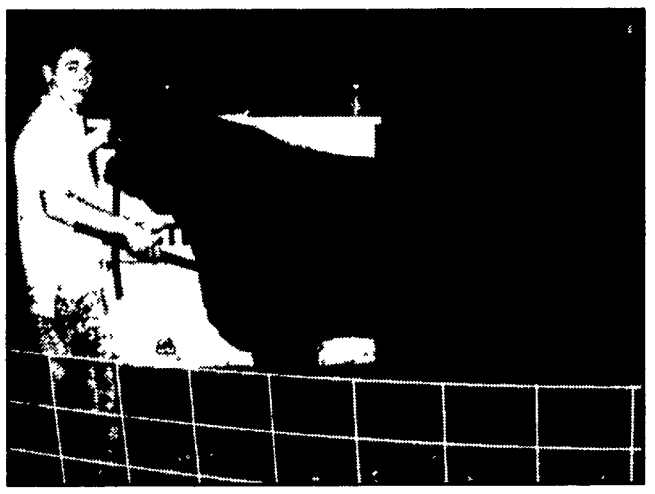
In the beef and swine sales, grand champion owner Colby Williamson of Cogan Station took home sale earnings of $2.50 per pound for his beef steer, purchased by Sunset Ice Cream, Williamsport, and $3.20 per pound for his market hog, purchased by Alexander Family Pontiac, bringing him one step closer to reaching a long term- goal.

Although Colby plans to save most of his earnings for college, he is quick to note that he has another goal-a new car. Although he is only 14, has began to save for a Mustang. By saving his earnings for a car, he hopes to miss out on having the "typical first car."

Outside of his sale success, Colby has another point of pride with his beef project. His grand champion steer was bred from his family's beef herd.

For Rhonda Hook, owner of the reserve grand champion market steer, this year's sale wraps up what has been a successful show season so far and a new "scholarship" to help this Bloomsburg University freshman.

Jordan Schrock, left set a new sale record with her champion market lamb at a selling price of $9.20 per pound.



Colby Williamson also sold his champion steer for $2.50 per pound.

This Mifflinburg FFA member has taken three reserve champion steer banners at three different fairs. However, as much as she has enjoyed this banner winning year, what she enjoys most about this whole experience is "being able to help others with their projects," said Hook. "(Each year) I can learn something new."

After the final wrap of the gavel, the Bloomsburg Fair Livestock Sale netted more than $38,122 in proceeds for 4-H'ers and FFA members selling their livestock animals. The annual event featured 55 young people who sold their livestock projects.

The sale averages were as follows: steers, including the champions, $1.39 per pound; lambs, including the champions, $2.11 per pound; and hogs, including the champions, $1.03 per pound.

MYCOTOXINS: SILENT THIEVES
Dr. Arlen Mills
Capitol Region
Extension Veterinarian
Lebanon

As we start a new feeding season each year, I enjoy asking producers what changes or response they have noticed to the new year's feed.

One factor of the new feeds which is not readily noticeable may be the levels of mycotoxins. Problems related to high mycotoxin levels are usually not so drastic as to be quickly noticed, with most toxic reactions appearing as poor weight gain, reproduction problems, reduced feed intake, and reduced milk production.

Some other symptoms which have been reported to be related to mycotoxin levels include higher than normal incidence of metabolic diseases such as ketosis, DA's retained placenta, intermittent diarrhea, and pregnant cows displaying heats.

I have had several calls asking if mycotoxin problems are increasing. To answer this, remember first that mycotoxins are dose related. A small amount may cause no concern, with problems only becoming evident at higher amounts.

In the last 25 years or so, we have almost doubled the intake of the dairy cow while the size of the cow has stayed about the same. This results in a much higher dose of mycotoxin per pound of animal, even if feed levels have stayed the same. Higher intake of toxins coupled with the increased stress of higher milk production could be blamed for an apparent increase in mycotoxin problems.

Some of the primary toxin producing fungi found in feed include Fusarium, Penicillium, and Aspergillus. Several toxins of concern are produced by Fusarium and include vomitoxin (DON), fumonisin, Zearalenone, and T-2. Actually, there may be hundreds of toxins produced but these are toxins which have been identified and are routinely tested for.

All fungi have three critical environmental requirements to grow. These are 1) temperatures above freezing, 2) moisture above 20 percent, and 3) oxygen. Limiting any one of these three requirements will reduce or prevent the growth of fungi, hence the formation of toxins. Limiting temperature and moisture may be difficult, so limiting oxygen in ensiled feeds is key. Oxygen is like a light switch, turning toxin production on and off during storage.

Much of the toxin may be formed in feeds before harvest. The longer corn is allowed to stand in the field after maturity, the greater the likelihood of toxin development. In the case of corn silage, corn harvested after frost is at even greater risk of toxin contamination. Remember that the level of toxins is usually greater in the cob than in the kernel and levels are not decreased by ensilement.

Dr. Arlen Mills

Just as you would not eat moldy food, a good rule to follow is to not feed moldy hay, haylage, or corn to your animals. There is no way to distinguish between toxic and nontoxic fungi by sight. However, the absence of visible mold does not guarantee that a feed is safe. Dangerous levels of mycotoxins can accumulate earlier during growth of the crop and often will not be visible.

Once mycotoxins are present in feeds, there are no practical means of decontamination. It may be diluted out with clean feed to an acceptable level or one of several binders may be tried. If the change is successful, increased feed intake and milk production are usually evident within a matter of days. I have also seen situations where one absorbent did not work but another did the job.

Review the following check list of practices that may assist in preventing mycotoxin problems:

- Purchase corn and grain varieties resistant to disease and insects.
- Harvest corn and haylage at the recommended maturity and moisture levels for your storage system.
- Do not let corn stand in the field after maturity or a killing frost.
- Be sure chopper knives are sharp and cutting at the correct length to pack properly.
- Harvest crops as quickly as possible, pack well to exclude oxygen, and cover or seal.
- Since toxins are water-soluble, do not allow rain to wash through upper layers of spoiled feed.
- Discard obviously spoiled feed or layers of feed.
- Clean out leftover feed from feed bunks before adding more feed.
- Match the rate of silage removal from the silo face with the size of the herd. This is 4 to 6 inches for bunker silos and 3 to 4 inches for upright silos.

With your veterinarian and nutritionist, consider the use of a toxin absorbent if a problem is identified.

Mycotoxin problems are usually hard to identify and may be even harder to fix. Don't let mycotoxins rob you of profits.

PLANNING AHEAD FOR CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS
Shelly Dehoff
Agriculture/Public Liaison

Are you considering expanding your current animal operation? Are you considering building a manure storage or a new equipment shed? Have you allowed yourself enough time to get all the permits that you need, and still be able to complete your project on time?

How much is "enough time"? That is a difficult question to answer. If you are planning to build a manure storage facility, or a new building, but are not planning to change the numbers of animals on your operation, time should still be allowed to meet certain township requirements. It is also important that you allow time for professionally engineered designs for manure storage facilities that meet the Pennsylvania Technical Guide Standards, or equivalent.

If you are planning an animal expansion that requires an approved Nutrient Management Plan or a federal Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation (CAFO) permit, you will need to increase the time required, substantially.

Most townships in Pennsylvania require a building permit to construct anything on your property. Your first step should be to check with your township and find out what is required to obtain a building permit. Requirements vary greatly. Check for other ordinance and zoning issues. You may have setbacks that you need to comply with, or additional township permits.

You may need an erosion and sedimentation (E&S) plan approved by your county conservation district. If you plan to disturb more than 1 acre of ground or if runoff from the construction site will discharge into a stream, an NPDES E&S permit may be required. Check with your local conservation district for specifics.

If you are undergoing a large change in your operation, a Land Development Plan may be required by the township. Hiring an experienced, knowledgeable professional should make this experience smoother and easier for you.

If you are planning to increase your current animal numbers or are planning to add an animal type not on your operation, you will need to check with your county conservation district to determine if you will need a certified Nutrient Management Plan. You may also need to apply for a federal CAFO permit. It is very important to hire experienced, knowledgeable professionals to assist with the permitting process. If a manure storage facility is part of the CAFO operation, there are additional permits required, which are issued at the same time the CAFO permit is issued.

The length of time required to obtain a CAFO permit varies greatly. Assume it will take approximately three months to have a certified nutrient management plan completed. If the operation already has a current, approved nutrient management plan, it will probably take 4-6 months to get a CAFO permit. The CAFO permitting process takes longer if the operation is in a High Quality (HQ) watershed, or if there is extensive public outcry. Public outcry can easily lengthen the process to a year or more. Don't forget to plan for a few months for actual construction, too.

Adequate planning and being sure you have a complete understanding with your township as to what is required will help major or minor construction projects at your farm be completed smoothly and reasonably on time.

FARM SHOW COMPLEX: A WORLD-CLASS VENUE

For people in the business of exhibiting livestock and dairy cattle, the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex provides the perfect venue.

About 550 exhibitors attended the All American Dairy Show Sept. 21-25 and more than 1,400 attended the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) Sept. 30-Oct. 6.

Several exhibitors I talked with say the newly expanded facility provides the amenities they need and the space they expect, and they say the service here far exceeds that found at many of the nation's top shows. In short, the Farm Show Complex has become a highly regarded and visible business venue for agriculture business, as well as a host of other business trade shows, exhibitions, and conventions.

The Farm Show Complex was host this year to the first annual National Hereford Show during KILE, one of only six such shows in the nation. The Pennsylvania Recreational Vehicle and Camping Show in September was an enormous success, packing the facility with equipment and anxious customers. The banquet facilities will be utilized this year for the annual Pennsylvania Farm Show Dinner. And the Farm Show itself will be host to several new exhibitors this year.

The $86.2 million renovation of the Farm Show Complex added a new equine arena, lobby, livestock area, barn, connector spine and rotunda. Major upgrades were done to sale areas, dormitories, meeting rooms, and the cafeteria/banquet hall. The larger, more modern facility, now ranked among the top five facilities of a similar nature in the U.S. is attracting new and varied clientele to the Farm Show Complex, including customers that once would have been impossible to accommodate. And the recent addition of facility-wide air conditioning means the Farm Show Complex is now open for business all year round.

In short, we want everyone to know we are open and ready for business with a world-class facility and a professional, "can-do" staff to help make your events successful.

Connecticut Girl Drives To Victory In Cart Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Young Davinia Saglio of Glastonbury, Connecticut swept the 8- to 13-year-old division competitions Friday morning at the Youth Draft Horse Show at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE), conducted at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

Saglio, 12, started her day winning the Youth Showmanship Class with her Percheron mare, Hazelwood Lynda's Brook. Accompanied by her father, Peter, whom she credits with teaching her how to drive horses, she continued the streak driving Hazelwood in the Cart class to victory. In her last class, she drove Hazelwood and Suzie to her final victory of the day winning the Youth Team Class.

"She out drives all of us, and today she finally won," said Saglio's excited mother Nancy.

Showing since the age of four, Saglio says she participates in roughly six shows per year nationwide. She owns three Percherons, which she keeps with her parent's 47 Percheron horses.

In the 14- to 19-year-old division, Melissa Restifo, 16, of Schoharie, NY won the Youth Showmanship and Cart classes, and placed 2nd in the Youth Team class. Restifo, a high school senior, has been showing and working for Ox Kill Farms for six years. She also rode this afternoon in the Youth English Riding class.

Specter Meets With Dairy Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) recently conducted two meetings with Pennsylvania dairy farmers to discuss the senator's proposed dairy legislation, The National Dairy Equity Act. For many of the farmers, this trip was their first to the nation's capitol and the first time they were asked to give input on legislation affecting their industry. Twenty-four dairy farmers attended the meetings on Tuesday and Thursday in the Senator's Washington office.

Senator Specter's proposed legislation would help stabilize the price of milk and support the income of dairy farmers through an over-order price system, which would require a minimum price to be paid to eligible producers. The legislation would also include provisions that take into consideration of the cost of production, including the price of feed, and cost of labor, machinery expenses, and other cash expenses such as hauling and veterinary services.

In addition to this legislation, Senator Specter was also original co-sponsor of S.154, the Emergency Agricultural Disaster Assistance Act of 2003, which would require that the same tariff-rate quotas currently assessed on related dairy products (cheeses and skim milk powder) be applied to Milk Protein Concentrates (MPC) and casein used in the food and animal feed industries. In 2003, Senator Specter authored several letters urging USDA to reconsider their decisions on the sale of butter, purchase prices for dairy products, and the consideration of the regional costs of feed, feed availability, or other region-specific economic factors.

Specter plans to use the input from these meetings in the final drafting of the bil.

"Having the support of Pennsylvania dairy farmers is very important to this legislation," said Senator specter after the meeting. "It is imperative to the state's economy and the livelihood of Pennsylvania farmers that we correct the disparities over milk pricing while taking into consideration factors like the cost of production. Agriculture is a major industry in Pennsylvania and I will continue my fight to improve the lives of farmers across the state."

BETTER BEATS BIGGER.
How do you shatter the world plowing record set by a 425 hp track tractor? You don't have to get bigger. You don't have to get tracks. You just have to get better. That's what happened when the Massey Ferguson 8280 fixed frame wheeled tractor set a new world record. The MF 8280 fine tuned to deliver 387 hp, outdid the predecessor by nearly 100 acres, plowing 621 acres in 24 hours.
What makes the MF 8280 better? Take a world class engine, a transmission that won't quit and add a powerful hydraulic system. Throw in a high tech control system that automatically monitors and adjusts the flow of power to the wheels for less slip and you've got better...more than 24 acres an hour better.
So don't just get a bigger tractor next time you have a big job to do. Get a better tractor. Get a Massey Ferguson 8280 and shatter some records yourself.

Higher Digestibility & Standability

MC 615 Corn Silage

Stands Above the Rest for Standability & Digestibility!

Master's Choice 615

A 115 day hybrid- Makes a sweet smelling, nutrient dense silage with high grain content, and excellent digestibility. Plant health is also excellent. Reports of 2002 and 2003 performance have been excellent. Comments made by farmers include: excellent yields, very few broken stalks, even after tropical storm Isabel went through, very high levels of sugar (typically 4 to 6%), and great packing characteristics.

Note: In extreme wind, leaves were shredded, and stalks blown over, but very few stalks were broken MC 615 has a dense, but shorter stalk - usually shorter than most silage hybrids.

The secret to Master's Choice standability and great digestibility is less lignin, but much more digestible cellulose fiber. MC 615 and its short season half sister MC 520Q have thick, dense stalks that are not only nutritious, but also yield outstanding for a corn of average height.

Ewes Spin Lead Line Fashions With KILE Exhibitors

Intermediate division first-place winner is Katrina Frey, Quarryville.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Wool spun a fashionable statement when modeled by ewes and their exhibitors at the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) Lead Line last Saturday at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

Exhibitors clothed in wool are judged not only for their poise and the complimentary fit of their own outfits, but also their ability to lead a lamb around the show ring, and the lamb's classy style for the breed's criteria.

To the inexperienced eye, an exhibitor may appear to be the most stylish among all the contestants. But judges look for more than that.

First and second place in the KILE junior division leadline were won by siblings Erica Torre, 11, and Anthony Torre, 10.

The lamb shown must be representative of its respective breed. And sheep, being restless by nature, sometimes defy the best-trained plans. A rambunctious sheep can topple an exhibitor's pose and cause a downward spiral on the judge's score sheets.

Joan Miller, who directs the annual show, said that scoring is often so competitive, that only a few points difference exists between the first- and last-placed contestant.

This year's event was separated into three divisions.

In the senior division, Katy Nolte, 16, modeled a 100-percent navy blue princess jacket with coordinating ankle-length plaid skirt. Katy led a Southdown yearling ewe sporting a bow made of the same material as Katy's skirt.

This was the first year that Katy of New Windsor, Md., showed market lambs at county and state fairs, but the second year for participating in KILE Lead Line. She has been sewing with wool the past two years.

Second-place in the senior division was Melana Lovell of Linden, who led a yearling Dorset, and Sara Byers, Enon Valley, placed third, leading a Polled Dorset ewe.

Katrina Frey took top honors in the intermediate division. Katrina, 13, Quarryville, wore a red wool fitted jacket and navy wool slacks. She helped her mother and grandmother make her outfit. Her bred-and-owned Suffolk yearling ewe wore a red sash that matched Katrina's jacket.

Second place in the intermediate division went to Liz Kuebler, 14, Kutztown, leading a Corriedale yearling ewe. Third place went to Ashley Madzia, 14, Beach City, Ohio. Ashley led a Montadale ewe lamb.

Topping the junior division were Erica Torre and her brother Anthony of Huntsburg, Ohio. Both siblings led a Hampshire ewe lamb and have been competing in Ohio state lead lines since they were three years old.

Eleven-year-old Erica wore a full-length military-style coat with back belt. She removed the coat to reveal a black and white houndstooth check wool victorian-style dress with black velvet buttons, collar, and bow.

Anthony modeled a typical Irish boy's outfit that he brought back from a visit in Ireland. Anthony's wool pants and Aran-knitted cardigan sweater was complemented by a wool flat cap in a variety of tweeds.

Third place in the junior division went to Kayla Beatty, Enon Valley, who led a Dorset ewe.

Make It With Wool Contestants Stich Success

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For months, 24 seamstresses pondered selections of fabric and accessories. They stitched, ripped, and stitched some more in preparation for the Make It With Wool state competition conducted last Saturday during the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition (KILE), at the Farm Show Complex.

Although three top winners were selected in four different divisions, only two participants will advance to national competition scheduled for Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 23-26.

Rachel Siegel, Lebanon, is the accomplished junior seamstress who will represent Pennsylvania at the national Make It With Wool Contest.

Rachel stitched faux fur earmuffs and scarf to complement the tailored three-fourth length coat she made from a wool-blend melton. The coat required tailored skill in finishing bound buttonholes, welt pockets with flaps, and lining. The coat is so thick that Rachel top-stitched it by hand.

Her lined gray tweed wool slacks with a purple stripe include a fly zipper, waistband, and in-seam pockets. Boots, gloves, and a purple sweater completed the outfit.

Leah Huston, Beaver Falls, placed second, and Amanda Stanton, Everett, third.

Heather Will, Somerset, representing the senior division, also

By winning first place in the junior division at state competition, Rachel Siegel, left, will head for national competing. Second place is Leah Huston, center, and third is Amanda Stanton.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

That wasn't frost on the pumpkin last week.

That was ice.

In a predictable finish to an unpredictable growing season, Mother Nature and Jack Frost had their annual go-round earlier than usual.

"And I was hoping for a long, warm fall," grumbled a young friend, pulling his shirt collar around his neck against the brisk breeze punching through the wind tunnel between the calf nursery and the old bank barn.

Some 30 acres of our late-planted soybeans were still a lush green color, their pods full of borderline-mature beans, the night last week that temperatures plummeted toward freezing. The Farmer, after a quick check of the fields soon after sunshine splashed across the meadow next morning, speculated that the frosty blanket had not missed much. Meanwhile, I lamented the end of the tomatoes, so far in decline among the lush weeds that covering them had seemed futile.

Even though we know frost can arrive here by mid-September, the first one never fails to find me darting around after dark, flashlight in hand, covering special plants. Enroute from tucking a tender calla lily under wraps for the night, I paused momentarily at a wax begonia, just covered with dainty, pale pink blossoms.

Too pretty to lose, I decided, tugging the shallow-rooted plant from the damp flower bed and parking it in a container of loose potting soil. It found company with a couple of colorful impatiens plants and two tender azaleas, already snuggled inside the greenhouse. In an unusually lucky bit of timing, I'd stapled new layers of plastic lining inside our little plant shelter just two days earlier.

Unseen at the time, there was company afoot out there, also hastening to batten down as early hints of the cold season came poking around the place.

Ears of yellow field corn, decoratively piled on the front porch with our single, large orange pumpkin and some colorful gourds, began to sport kernel-less bare spots. Bad enough that the mice are making overtures about moving in to share our shelter; even worse, I'd been laying out a banquet for them on the porch.

The corn went into a container for winter squirrel feeding. Squirrels are scarce enough in our yard that we provide them ears of corn, stuck on a nail in a tree. mice get, um, other offerings.

But, not only are mice on the move. Other critters have been hastily crawling for cover, already decked out in their seasonal fuzzy fashions. Wooly worms.

Wooly worms on the porch. Wooly worms at the barn. In the yard. On the basement floor? That last was a bad choice, because the fuzzy, black-and-brown catepillar I spied on the floor while pulling on my barn shoes wasn't moving. Seeking refuge in the house had turned it into wooly-worm roadkill. Or, maybe "floorkill" is more accurate.

While an early frost may have hastened the wooly worms about their journeys, they seem to be in some disagreement on their weather predictions. Traditionally, brown-colored wooly worms mean a mild winter, black wooly worms mean a harsh winter, and mixed bands equate to mixed weather.

The first one spotted totally chilled me out. It was a solid black, indicative of a fierce and bitter winter. But, the floorkilled one sported black "bookends" with a brown middle, or a mild winter flanked by early and late bitter weather. Several more seen hustling around after the frost were identical, offering hope for breaks in Artic-type weather.

By midweek, frost damage appeared to be considerably less than feared. While our couple acres of sudan grass were nipped pretty badly, the soybeans barely had their heads clipped with the chill. Those lush grassy clumps sheltered the lingering tomatoes to enjoy a bit longer. And the wooly worms continue on the move.

Watch where you step.

received an expense-paid trip to national competition. Heather stitched a 100-percent gray flannel wool suit. The double-breasted jacket with lining was hand-quilted. Padded shoulders, front slash pockets, and a semi-fit makes it perfect for winter wear. The slacks are lined just below the knee to allow for slits at the bottom. A wool sweater and scarf complemented the outfit.

Taking first place in the adult and in the made-for-others division was Sharon Donahoe, Bedford. Her outfit and a photograph of her wearing it will be sent for national competition judging. If her project is selected, she will also receive an expense-paid trip to national competition.

Sharon modeled a two-piece suit that she designed incorporating several different patterns. The loose-fitting, fully interfaced and lined jacket has a collar, slightly extended shoulders, and is made from navy and off-white micro weave Pendleton wool suiting. The pockets and buttonholes are triangular shaped and made of coordinating fabric used for slacks. The tapered slacks are made of navy blue Pendleton wool.

In the made-for-others category, Sharon stitched an English wool suit for Kristie Corle, who modeled it.

Capturing first-place in the preteen division was Madison Ochoco, Doylestown. The 8-year-old chose a lightweight charcoal gray wool to make a flared jumper with buttoned shoulders.

Second place went to Stephanie Augustine, Palmerton. Tied for third place were Amber Getz, Lehighton, and Gabrielle Augustine, Palmerton.

Consuming Thoughts

Water is critical for athletic performance. As a nutrient often overlooked, water is essential for all body functions and is of special concern to all athletes during periods of strenuous exercise, especially in hot surroundings. Just as an engine needs coolant to keep it running well, so does your exercising body. Without enough water you become weak and your body can overheat.

Your most important nutritional goal should be to prevent dehydration. Dehydration increases the risk of heat injuries such as heat cramps, heat exhaustion and potentially fatal heat stroke. Drinking water before, during and after practices and events is essential to prevent dehydration even though you may not be thirsty.

Students often ask what and how much should I drink on the day of an event or practice? You need to experiment during practice to find out what works best. Start with these recommendations: Before activity: (2 hours before) drink 1-2 cups of water, then 5-15 minutes before the event drink 1 cup cool water. (Cool drinks empty from the stomach more readily than warm drinks and help performance).

During activity (every 10-15 minutes) drink ½ cup to 1 cup cool water or as often as possible.

After activity: (After cooling down) drink any of the following: water, fruit juice or drinks, sports drinks, carbonated soft drinks, and eat foods high in water content such as grapes, watermelon, and citrus fruits.

Water bottles are provided for most athletic events. You should have you own container and not share bottles to avoid spreading infectious diseases. This is especially important at indoor events in the winter such as basketball and volleyball when flu and cold viruses are prevalent.

If water is not provided, place a filled water bottle in the refrigerator the night before a game or practice and take it with you in a small cooler.

Should I use water, sports drinks, fruit juice or soft drinks? Drinks containing 10 percent or greater sugar concentration such as carbonated soft drinks; fruit juices such as orange and apple; and juice drinks can cause cramps, nausea, bloating or diarrhea if used right before an event. These drinks, especially fruit juice, are fine to use as a fluid replacer after an athletic event.

Sports drinks such as Gateraid that contain 6-8 percent glucose (a compound that makes up sugar) and electrolytes (sodium, chloride and potassium) are used by the body as quickly as water. They do not cause intestinal problems. For endurance events (activities lasting 90 minutes or more such as bicycling), sports drinks can provide energy to working muscles and help keep body fluids in balance during long-lasting exercise.

Most teens athletes are not endurance athletes. Plain water will sufficiently meet the fluid replacement needs for most.

If you feel it's important to use sports drinks, there is no harm in doing so. Sports drinks are often the "in thing." The important issue is that you drink.

How do I know if I am getting enough to drink? The best and most practical indicators are the color and amount of urine produced. Look for clear, light-colored urine, and frequent urination. Those are signs that your body is getting enough fluid. Dark colored urine and infrequent urination are clues that indicate more fluids are needed. These signs are not always reliable if you are on medication or taking vitamin supplements that can cause the urine to be more concentrated or discolored.

Some sports require weigh-ins before and after activity which gives you the coaching staff a way to measure water loss during an activity.

What should I drink at times other than practice and game days? Water! It's the smart choice.

Sheepberry Farms Wins Champion Fleece

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — Sheepberry Farms, Halifax, was awarded the Grand Champion fleece at York Interstate Fair, which was conducted in mid-September.

Exhibitors from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and several other states entered wool representing the many variety of sheep produced in the east.

Sheepberry Farms is owned and operated by Terry and Christine Flanagan. The Flanagan's raise several different breeds of sheep: Border Leicester, Rambouillet, Suffolk, Targhee, and commercial crossbreed. The fleeces shown at the York Interstate Fair represented one year's growth, which started after shearing in 2002.

The grand champion fleece was produced by a natural color Border Leicester ram. Border Leicester wool is a coarse wool, but soft to touch, with high lustrous curly locks. The Flanagan's entered a total of 13 fleeces and took seven first place ribbons, two second place, three third place, and one fourth place award. Two of the first place fleeces were also awarded a reserve champion ribbon for individual wool classifications.

The Flanagan's take great pride in the quality of the wool produced at Sheepberry Farms. Prize-winning fleeces start with a healthy well maintained sheep flock, careful shearing, and proper storage. Wool is mostly protein and can be damaged by illness to the sheep, improper or poor nutrition, extreme weather conditions, and stress.

Approximately 300 sheep and lambs reside on the 80 acres of Sheepberry Farms, along with seven llamas, a few chickens, some cats, and one Border collie dog. In addition to the livestock, the Sheepberry Farms has produced prize-winning flowers, such as dahlias and iris. The Flanagan's raise about 15 varieties of dahlias and 12 varieties of iris.

"Farming is a real adventure," comments Christine Flanagan, "most people can not appreciate the intense labor needed to produce the many items so plentiful that we use every day besides food and clothing."

To help educate the non-farming public the Flanagan's perform wool spinning and weaving demonstrations, teach workshops for schools and tourist centers, and open their farm to school and church field trips.

Compare Prepaid Phone Cards Carefully

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Price per minute doesn't tell the whole story — 1021 minutes for $20. There may be other charges, taxes, and fees in the fine print at the bottom or on the back of the card. Some are connection fees, monthly maintenance fees, and extra fees for using pay phones or calling cell phones.

A connection fee of 59 cents per call on a card of 2 cents per minute costs you 30 minutes if anyone or an answering machine answers your call. If your card has a three-minute minimum, you will be charged for three minutes even if you only talk for 30 seconds. This call would cost you 33 mintues (66 cents) and you talked for 30 seconds.

The minutes disappear quickly when these charges are on your card. Look for the cards that don't have these extra charges.

Home-Grown — It's More Than Just Good Food

Bill Henning
Cornell Cooperative Extension

People of the Amish and Mennonite faiths have a long tradition of operating small farms successfully. One of the key factors that contribute to their success is their low family living expense. A significant part of their cost control is derived by producing as much of their own food as possible.

This article is the result of an interview with the father and mother of a Plain faith family in Yates County, New York. Due to their faith they prefer to remain unidentified, so we'll just call them the Smith family. There are twelve members of this family: the parents and ten children ranging in age from about 18 months to 17 years.

Soul Of The Farm

Gene Logsdon, agrarian author, describes the garden as the soul of the farm. Father Smith understands that well, especially in today's mechanized agriculture where speed and noise often inhibit the opportunities for building relationships with children.

The back door of the Smith's kitchen opens to a cornucopia of abundance. The half-acre garden produces radishes, onions, carrots, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, sweet corn, peas, cucumbers, string beans, potatoes, strawberries, asparagus, cantaloupe, tomatoes, watermelon, peppers, rhubarb, mint, sweet potatoes, lima beans, kohlrabi, squash, and popcorn.

The orchard provides sweet and sour cherries, plums, apricots, six varieties of peaches, pears, persimmons, and eleven varieties of apples. Vine crops include grapes, blackberries, and raspberries.

The farm also produces beef, pork, chicken, eggs, and milk. The family consumes one or two gallons of milk each day, and home-made ice cream is an often-enjoyed treat.

What Is Food Worth?

Let's consider how little food the Smith family needs to purchase. Grocery shopping is done about four times a year. Price is important and they purchase many items in bulk or in large quantities. Here's what they buy: pretzels (a lot of pretzels!), box cereal, crackers, chocolate chips, some ice cream, macaroni, noodles, cheese, hot dogs, flour, sugar, salt, oatmeal, whole wheat (for home-made bread), and coffee. They spend an estimated $1,600 per year for groceries, and feel that this is extravagant compared to the food expenditures their parents made when they were children.

Each month the USDA publishes estimates of family food costs at four different levels: Thrifty, Low-cost, Moderate-Cost, and Liberal. Based on the USDAs figures, if the Smith's family of twelve purchased all their food at grocery stores and prepared their meals at home, their annual grocery store expenditures under the Low-cost Plan would be $17,214.

If you compare this amount to the estimated $1,600 the Smith's actually do spend on groceries, their home grown food yields a gross return of over $15,000 annually. That figure jumps to over $21,000 annually on the Moderate-Cost Plan.

Greater Value
Not Measured In Money

Saving money is great, but Father and Mother Smith agree that home-grown food also provides an invaluable learning experience. Each child learns that a job is not done until it is done right. If a row of beans is not completely weeded, the weeders will stay on the job until all the weeds are pulled. The children learn how to follow instructions and come away with a sense of accomplishment.

This is all done in a positive light and almost always involves a team approach. There is a great deal of family interaction with time to talk. Parents and children work side by side. In this case the men do most of the producing work, gardening and tending stock, while the women do most of the processing. Beyond the conversations, singing and games are also common pastimes during the day's activities.

Allowances are not an incentive for all this activity. Every one pitches in simply because they are part of the family. When the family works together they have the opportunity to enjoy one another. In this perspective, what might otherwise be viewed as drudgery now becomes fun. The focus is not so much on the work but on the joy of good fellowship.

The Smith children already have a wealth of great memories they will carry for the rest of their lives. Whether from cleaning stock pens, picking stones, pruning trees, or picking berries, the family's close bonds have been tied tight through countless hours of productive associations. So much so, that the children look forward to new seasons, new gardens, and new harvests.

In Season And In Winter

Having a garden just outside the kitchen and an orchard just a few steps farther represents an opulent convenience, especially by today's standards. A diverse variety of foods changes as the seasons progress, and creates anticipation for the next gourmet delights that await those who harvest. As Father Smith sees it, Fresh-picked produce is a mouth-watering delight that is to truly savor!

Father and Mother can look to the winter season comfortable in the knowledge that there are two big freezers filled to the brim. There are over 600 quarts of canned fruit alone, not to mention a cold storage room full to capacity. We would feel guilty buying food in a store, Father says, when all this is available right here.

Mother Smith feels good about the quality of food she puts on the table. She knows all about their home produced food: how it was grown, how it was harvested and how it was processed. Whatever additives there might be in their home produced food, she takes consolation in knowing exactly what they are, and they all meet with her approval.

The Bottom Line

After reviewing a draft of this article, Father Smith sat there, somewhat puzzled, and then tried to sum up it all up. When he got done we both knew what he meant. Neither of us quite knew how to say it.

This is an attempt at making his point: When apples are brought up out of the storage in the winter and the children say, Are these our apples? You sense they have a feeling of being a part of something important something meaningful. Whether it is apples, or onions, or bacon, they had a hand in it. They know what is involved in making it happen. They appreciate what everybody contributed. They also appreciate the confidence in themselves that they've gained by learning, by doing, and by solving some problems on their own. With every passing year, as the garden grows, so grow the children in more ways than one.

If Not For YOU,
Then For THEM

October is Breast Health Awareness Month.

So what, you say?

You're over 40 years of age. You've "heard" that a mammogram is painful, you just don't have the time, you say that breast cancer doesn't run in your family, you don't have the extra money for the doctor's visit for the clinical breast exam and then the cost of the mammogram, you have poor or no health insurance and; heaven forbid, if they would find breast cancer how would you pay for it?

Excuses like these are hazardous to your life!

Yet, today there are still women who want to ignore that the disease exists. They "do not want to know." That was the exact quote spoken to me by a middle-age woman at one of our food pantry distribution sites a couple of years ago.

Her comment blind-sided me for a split second, but somehow I rallied with the question, "Do you have children or grandchildren?"

She replied, "Yes."

I quickly responded with "Don't you want to see them grow up? Don't you think that you owe it to 'them' if not for you?"

At that point she seemed less hurried and was willing to listen as I shared information on how she could get a free clinical breast exam and a mammogram through a local women's health clinic.

I realize that women, by nature, always put their family members first when money is short. If you are one of these women, there is a time you must take care of "yourself" so you will be there for "them."

One must realize that today early detection of breast cancer is not a death sentence but a ray of hope. I'm sure that you can think of many women in your community who are living healthy lives as a result of their hope and will to see their children and grandchildren grow up.

The spirit of hope is alive and thriving in many communities as people of all backgrounds work together to provide free and low-cost breast screenings, support for those diagnosed with cancer, support for research and education. If you have not contacted your local hospital, women's health clinic, department of health, or cancer unit, do so today to find out what is available in your area for breast health care and screening.

If you need further motivation, here's a verse of hope written by Dr. Kurt P. Dudt, chairperson of the Department of Communications at Indiana University of Pennsylvania that he wrote for a friend.

Roanne's Cancer

Sleepless nights, worry and fear, tired, pain, thoughts of dread, long gazes into her children's bedroom.
Who will care for them?
Who will give mother's love?
Uncertainty, when will it end?
What is the outcome? Thoughts of dread, trips to the hospital, radiation, sick, tired, and pain.
How, now, is hope defined?
Alone, silent, deep in thought, introspective, changed perception, giddy, giggles, lighthearted moods, all memory, thoughts of dread.
Where is hope, how defind?
Encouragement rare, but June is here.
Soft rains, blue phlox, scents alive, morning mist, soft cool breezes, buttercups, blackberries in bloom.
Uplifted spirit, trust this mood!

Improve Child Observation Skills

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Improving And Using Your Observation Skills is the title of the workshop being presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension for child care providers and parents. The workshop is from 7 p.m.-9 p.m. on Thursday, October 23, at Berks County Ag Center, 1238 County Welfare Rd., Leesport.

Sue Giachero, Penn State Cooperative Extension family living agent in Berks County, said, "Learning child observation skills can be a powerful tool for solving some of the most important problems faced by child care providers. Observing children is a critical part in providing quality care for young children."

According to Giachero, the workshop will provide caregivers with examples of good observation techniques and demonstrate skills necessary to do useful observations. There will also be a discussion on how to use the observation results in programming.

The workshop is part of a statewide Better Kid Care, a childcare provider training program. Childcare providers can receive two Department of Public Welfare training credits for participating in the workshop. Continuing Education Credits (CEUs) are also available.

For more information on the program, support materials, and other services from the "Better Kid Care Program," call Sue Giachero at (610) 378-1327.

Veal makes any meal special.

Need some tips when selecting flavorful, tender veal cuts?

- Make veal your last stop at the grocery store. Look for a package without tears or punctures with no signs of leakage. Purchase veal and other perishables on or before the "sell by" date.
- Select veal that is creamy pink in color with fine-grained texture. Any fat covering should be milky white.
- At home, store veal promptly in the meat compartment or the coldest part of the refrigerator. Unopened veal may be refrigerated for 1-2 days after purchase.
- Veal may be frozen. If used within two weeks of purchase, keep it in its original wrapping. For longer storage, rewrap veal in heavy-duty aluminum foil or freezer paper. Or place in freezer-safe plastic bags (press out as much air as possible). Label and freeze at 0 degrees of lower.
- Freeze ground veal up to three months; chops and steaks 6-9 months.
- Defrost veal in refrigerator. Allow 12 hours for one-inch thick chops, steaks, or patties. Grilling veal from the frozen state is not recommended.

VEAL BREAST WITH OLIVE-MUSHROOM FILLING

1 boneless veal breast (2-½ to 3 pounds)
2 teaspoons olive oil
⅓ cup dry Marsala
2½ cups uncooked mini lasagna or bow tie pasta, cooked

Olive-Mushroom Filling:

2 teaspoons olive oil
1 cup chopped mushrooms
1 cup diced red bell pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup chopped pitted ripe olives
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary

Heat 2 teaspoons oil in Dutch oven over medium heat until hot. Add mushrooms, bell pepper and garlic; cook and stir 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in olives and rosemary; cool.

Unroll veal breast; trim fat. Spread filling over veal, leaving ¾-inch border. Starting at short end, roll up jelly-roll fashion; tie with string.

Heat 2 teaspoons oil in same pan over medium heat until hot. Add veal; brown evenly. Pour off drippings. Add Marsala and ⅓ cup water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover tightly and simmer 1-½ to 1-¾ hours or until veal is fork-tender.

Remove veal; keep warm. Skim fat. Bring cooking liquid to a boil; cook until reduced to ¾ cup, stirring occasionally. Carve veal. Serve over pasta with sauce.

Makes 8 servings.

ANSWER — Rita Oshman, Bloomsburg, requested the recipe for canned tomato juice cocktail that was published last year. She lost the recipe. Thanks to Rita Bayler, who sent in the recipe last year and this one.

Canned Tomato Juice Cocktail

12 large, ripe tomatoes
4 medium-sized carrots
2 large sweet green or red peppers
4 celery stalks, diced leaves included
2 onions, diced
1 garlic clove, minced
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons honey or to taste
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
2 bay leaves
2 sprigs fresh basil or dill or thyme (if desired)

Wash unblemished tomatoes; remove stems and cores; cut into small pieces. Scrub and grate carrots. Core, seed, and mince peppers. Combine all ingredients in large stainless steel or enamel kettle. Simmer over low heat 45 to 50 minutes, stirring occasionally, until vegetables are soft. Pick out herbs. Strain through sieve. To can: Return strained juice to kettle and bring to a boil. Pour into hot jars leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process quarts 30 minutes at 10 pounds pressure. To freeze, pour into freezer containers. Seal, label, date, and freeze. Yield: 4 quarts.

ANSWER — Norma Breininger, New Tripoli, wanted a recipe to make wet walnuts similar to those used in making ice cream sundaes. Thanks to Sulaiha Lowe for sending instructions. She writes that she loves wet walnuts on ice cream but finds them much too sugary and gets a hypoglycemic reaction. She experimented with the recipe and found the following recipe to be better in every way — even taste.

Wet Walnuts

Brown rice syrup (found in health food stores or supermarkets). Brands have different levels of sweetness. She uses the middle level.
Walnut or pecan halves or pieces

Use equal amounts of syrup and nuts according to need. Warm syrup over low heat. Remove from heat. Roast nuts in toaster oven or dry frying pan until light nutty fragrance comes from them. Be careful not to burn them. Add hot nuts to warm syrup. Serve over ice cream.

ANSWER — Margaret Grieff, Sidman, wanted a recipe for fillings and dough to make "Hot Pockets." Thanks to a reader for sending these recipes.

Quick Method

Spicy Tomato Hot Pockets

2 (Pepperridge Farm's) pastry sheets (if frozen place in microwave. Don't overdo it).
4 tomatoes
1 big onion
2-3 green chilies
2 teaspoons red chilie powder
1 teaspoon tumeric powder
1 teaspoon mustard seed
1 small bunch coriander leaves
Salt to taste
Oil enough to saute the above

Chop finely onions and green chilies, set aside. When oil is heated, add mustard seeds. When it splutters, add onions and chilies, saute well. When onions are transparent, add chopped tomatoes, chili powder, turmeric powder, and salt. Mix well, let cook a few minutes until mixture boils well and turns into a thick consistency. Add chopped coriander leaves at the end.

Cut pastry sheets into small rectangles. Slightly stretch each piece with your hand. Into each of these pieces, put two spoons tomato mixture and fold it with the mixture inside. Make small pockets like this out of the two pastry sheets and place in a preheated oven for 5 minutes at 200 degrees. Bake for another 20 minutes at the same temperature. The pastry sheet forms a layer cover for the tomato pocket, which is very tasty.

Chicken Hot Pockets Filling

2 cups cooked chopped chicken
3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1 tablespoon chopped green onions or chives
2 tablespoons milk
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix cream cheese with milk until blended. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Follow above instructions for cooking.

ANSWER — A steady reader wanted a recipe for "snails," such as the ones sold at The Pie Shoppe, Laughlintown. Thanks to a Meyersdale reader for sending instructions.

Roll out regular pie dough as for a jelly roll. Spread dough with butter. Sprinkle with granulated sugar and cinnamon as much as desired. Roll up and cut into one-inch lengths. Set on end in baking pan and bake at 350-375 degrees until lightly browned.

ANSWER — Mrs. Simon Yoder, Garrett, requested a recipe for pickled green tomatoes with dill. Thanks to Sue Hurley, Newville, for sending a recipe. Sue writes that this is a canning recipe, but she uses the same ingredients and keeps the mixture in jars without processing in the refrigerator. The jars keep a long time and the tomatoes don't get mushy. She also likes to put one hot pepper and cut up cauliflower along with the green tomatoes.

Dilled Green Tomatoes

5 pounds small firm green tomatoes
3½ cups distilled vinegar
3½ cups water
¼ cup canning salt
6-7 garlic cloves
Fresh dill or dill seeds (I use dry)
6-7 bay leaves

Wash and core tomatoes, cut into halves or quarters. Combine vinegar, water, and salt; bring to a boil. Pack tomatoes into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Add one garlic clove, 1 head dill or 2 tablespoons dill seeds, and 1 bay leaf to each jar. Pour hot liquid over tomatoes, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process 15 minutes in boiling water bath. Yield: about 6-7 pints.

Here is another recipe from Leona Matz, Galeton.

Hot Green Tomatoes

Boil 1 quart vinegar with 3 quarts water and 1 cup salt.

In bottom of quart jar, put 1 sprig dill, ⅛ teaspoon alum, 1 teaspoon mustard seed.

Layer tomatoes. Put 4 strips hot pepper (optional) along sides of jar and 2 whole garlic buds on top. Pour vinegar mixture over top and process 10 minutes in hot boiling water.

ANSWER — Brenda Martin, Reinholds, requested a recipe to make soy sauce. Thanks to Lee Laverty for sending the following information: Soy sauce is generally not made at home. It is labor intensive and takes months to complete the fermentation process. Once the bottle is opened, soy sauce reacts with oxygen in the air and loses some of its flavor for one month. It is best to keep soy sauce refrigerated in order to maintain its excellent flavor. It should stay tasty for at least six months. Soy sauce has a pH of about 4.8 and contains about 18 percent salt. The high salt content acts as a preservative.

ANSWER — Thanks to Gerry Seipt for sending in her favorite dressing for tossed salad. A friend gave her the recipe 30 years ago.

Honey Dressing

⅔ cup sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon celery seed or 1 tablespoon poppy seed
⅓ cup honey
⅓ cup wine vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon finely chopped onion
1 cup salad oil

Mix dry ingredients (prefers to substitute poppy seeds for celery seeds). Add honey, vinegar, lemon juice, and onion. Pour oil into this mixture slowly, while beating it with an electric beater. Refrigerate between uses. Stir before serving. Makes 2 cups.

Well Preserved

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions.

Food and Floods

Recent storms have made us mindful of the necessity of being prepared for emergencies. Both power outages and flooding can affect food storage. In a previous column we discussed how to handle foods in a power outage. A recent phone caller to the extension office reported that all her home canned foods were under water and she wondered what she could save. Thus, today's column will address food safety in floods. The following recommendations are from the USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service.

Because flood water contains many different types of pollutants, most foods that come into contact with them will need to be destroyed to prevent illness. All unwrapped foods, crown-capped bottles, screw-top glass containers, flip top cans, and packaged foods that are not airtight and cannot be washed will need to be destroyed.

Glass and plastic bottles and jars (even ones that have been opened) should be discarded. Examples include mayonnaise, flavoring extracts, jellies, bottled water, and vegetable oil. The cork-lined, waxed cardboard, pop tops, peel-off tops, or waxed seals used in these bottles and jars are nearly impossible to clean around the lid or opening. The grooves and indentations around the openings and the liners are good hiding places for bacteria. Home canned foods are in the same category. The sealing compound that comes into contact with the rim of the glass jar can harbor bacteria that are not destroyed in a disinfectant wash.

Discard foods in cardboard boxes such as juice boxes, paper, foil, cellophane, cloth, or any other kind of flexible container. The paper covering is a great place for harmful bacteria to hide. Other items to discard are fresh produce, spices, seasonings, flour, sugar, grains, pasta, coffee and others staples stored in canisters, and opened containers and packages of any kind. Discard canned goods that are dented on the lids or seams, or that are leaking or bulging because these are signs or gasses forming inside the can from spoilage already taking place. Discard canned goods that are rusted unless the rust can be easily removed by light rubbing.

So what can be saved? Commercially canned goods in smooth top tin type cans that are not bulging, leaking, or dented. Note that an increasing number of canned products have a pop top lid similar to a soda can and can not be safely sanitized. For cans with smooth lids, use the following procedure for safely sanitizing them. Mark the contents on the can with a permanent ink pen. Remove paper labels because they can harbor dangerous bacteria. Wash cans in a strong detergent solution with a scrub brush. Carefully clean areas around lids and seams. Soak cans in a solution of 2 teaspoons chlorine bleach per quart of room temperature water for 15 minutes. Place cans on sides to air dry. Cans need to dry before opening. Throw away any cans that may have come in contact with industrial or septic waste. If you are unsure about the safety of any food, throw it out.

Remember to clean and sanitize any kitchen areas and items that have come in contact with flood waters. Scrub kitchen counters, pantry shelves, refrigerators, and stoves with warm soapy water. Rinse and wipe with a solution of 2 teaspoons of chlorine bleach to one quart of water using a clean cloth. Sanitize dishes and glassware the same way. Disinfect metal pans and utensils by boiling them in water for 10 minutes. Wooden and plastic items may absorb or hide bacteria making them difficult to clean and sanitize. Therefore, discard wooden spoons, wooden cutting boards, plastic utensils, and baby bottle nipples and pacifiers. Wash all kitchen linens in detergent and hot water, and use a chlorine bleach to sanitize them following directions on the bleach container.

If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays, 10 a.m.-1 p.m., call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Rm. 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

ANSWER — Warren Glidewell, Bloomsburg, wanted to know where to find Flemish giant rabbits in a fawn color. Thanks to a reader who offers the following information: Closest breeder to Bloomsburg: Frank Welch, Linden: (570) 321-1013; or you can go online and get more information from the National Federation of Flemish Giant Rabbit Breeder: www.NFFGRB.com.

Are You Turning 65 Soon?

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — If you or someone you know will turn 65 soon, take note. At 65, you can take advantage of Medicare, a federally-subsidized insurance plan, but there are rules, and they're strict.

It's crucial that you begin planning for your induction into Medicare at least nine months before your birthday.

If you fail to enroll in Medicare during the seven-month window around your 65th birthday, you can't enroll until the following calendar year — Jan. 1 to March 31. And coverage won't begin until July 1 of that year.

A costly mistake because premiums will increase to include a permanent penalty of 10 percent for each year's delay in applying.

Determined Young Lady Shows At KILE

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Her braided pigtails bounce from shoulder to shoulder and pink cowboy boots stomp through the sawdust as 10-year-old Shannon Kelle of Arcade, N.Y., leads her shorthorn heifer, Missie Dolly, through the show arena.

Many young showmen exhibited livestock at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex, but none more determined than Shannon.

Born legally blind, Shannon has undergone five cornea transplants and four cryogenic surgeries. She was diagnosed with secondary glaucoma, but that does not slow down the Pioneer Central Elementary student.

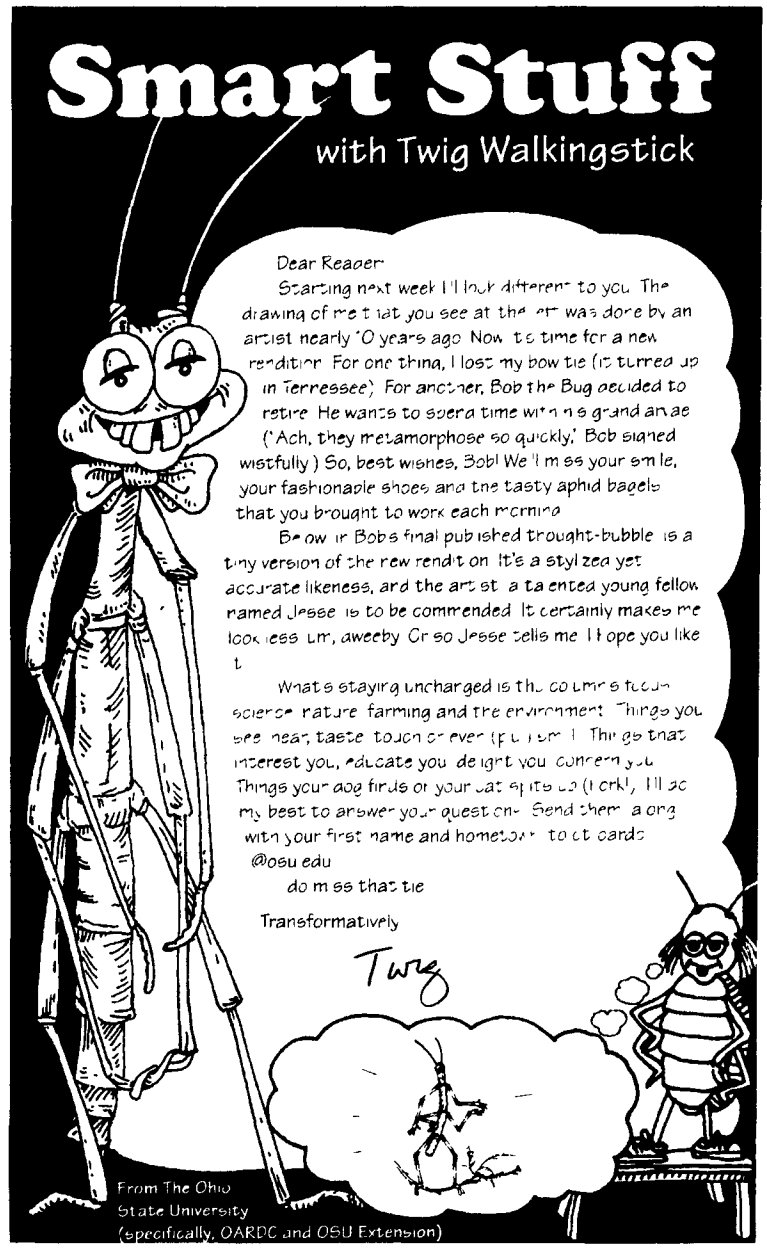
Sipping on a cup of hot chocolate after the show, Shannon explained that not only do her interests lie in showing her uncle's cattle, but also in riding bikes, spending time with friends and playing the piano.

"I'm the first person in my family to learn how to play an instrument," she said.

Shannon and her father Earle traveled to Pennsylvania to show and sell three head of cattle at the sale last Saturday. She has exhibited at the New York State Fair and the Erie County Fair.

Shannon Kelle, 10, doesn't let blindness interfere with showing cattle at Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

"My dad is the one that got me into showing cattle," said Shannon. Her calf sold for $600 and will be used as a breeding project.



Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Reader
Starting next week I'll look different to you. The drawing of me that you see at the art was done by an artist nearly 10 years ago. Now is time for a new rendition. For one thing, I lost my bow tie (it turned up in Tennessee). For another, Bob the Bug decided to retire. He wants to spend time with his grandniece ('Ach, they metamorphose so quickly,' Bob sighed wistfully.) So, best wishes, Bob! We'll miss your smile, your fashionable shoes and the tasty aphid bagels that you brought to work each morning.
Below is Bob's final published thought-bubble is a tiny version of the new rendition. It's a stylized yet accurate likeness, and the artist, a talented young fellow named Jesse, is to be commended. It certainly makes me look less um, aweeby. Or so Jesse tells me. I hope you like it.
What's staying uncharged is the column's focus: science, nature, farming and the environment. Things you see, hear, taste, touch or even (gulp!) smell. Things that interest you, educate you, delight you, concern you. Things your dog finds or your cat spits up (I'm sorry!). I'll do my best to answer your questions. Send them along with your first name and hometown to twig@osu.edu.
I do miss that tie.

Muscle, Grunts, Cheers Dominate Kid Olympics, Pedal Power Pull

Tractor pull champions in the 3- to 4-year-old division are Allison Parrish and Ian Elkins.

LOU ANN GOOD

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Grunts, cheers, and muscle dominated the Agri-Kid Olympics and the Pedal Power Pull last Saturday at the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition.

Sponsored by Lebanon Valley Farmer's Bank/Fulton Bank, the events provide a chance for kids to compete in age division for ribbons and trophies. The popular event is conducted annually. Some of the olympics include a haybale toss, ring toss, and wheelbarrow race.

The ever-popular pedal power pull requires participants to pedal a tractor loaded with weights. The space pedaled is measured, which requires participants who pedal a full pull to compete in playoffs with heavier weights.

In the haybale toss, this contestant throws with all her strength.

Pedaling a tractor is no easy feat for competitors. Weights are added to the tractor pull as competition advances.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My morning glories have just begun to bloom and now the mornings are so very cool. So, I fear that there will only be a few more big blue blossoms to enjoy. I feel as though we had a short summer and fall has come too soon.

My 65th high school reunion was last week and about 30 classmates came to enjoy each other's company. Half of our class are no longer living and some are in nursing homes. Some of us are quite active and the committee that planned the event gave everyone a list of addresses and phone numbers to contact each other.

My husband and I were able to attend one of the many community fairs in our county. The attraction for us was the pigs that our grandsons were showing. They were pleased to have some of the champion pigs again and they received trophies. It certainly is different than showing heifers as our children did in 4-H shows. You do not lead the pigs, they simply run everywhere.

It can be almost a full-time job simply keeping our children informed as to what their siblings are doing. It does make the job easier by using the telephone instead of just writing a letter. One is having her house painted, one just got a new boat, and one had a lightning strike near his home that ruined his appliances. One is publishing a community newpaper, another got a new job, and our youngest daughter often phones us from distant cities where she goes on business.

All of that activity is in my past and I shall try to be satisfied with what I have now.

Montgomery Co. 4-H'ers Sell Market Animals

Luke Gehman sold his grand champion market hog to Leidy's Inc. for $651, represented by karen Brown.

Alice Philips sold her grand champion market lamb to I.T. Landis and Sons Inc. for $357, represented by Chris Landis.

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Every August at the Montgomery County 4-H Fair the Fair is brought to a close by the Market Animal Sale. LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible. a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Computers made it possible to reprint the map Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day"

Why every angler and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish Regardless of which group you fall into there's a sure way to up your odds simply try new fishing waters Now with this map you can find hidden streams and lakes

Pennsylvania, Ohio, New England, Maryland & Delaware and New York are loaded with great fishing holes many of them overlooked Thousands of miles of streams, rivers and lakes are now easy-to-locate on one map

The 3-foot-by-5-foot Pennsylvania map shows 45,000 miles of streams plus lakes

The 3-foot-by-3-foot Ohio map shows 29,000 miles of streams plus lakes

The 3 1/2-foot-by-4 1/2-foot New York map shows 65,000 miles of streams plus lakes

The 3-foot-by-4-foot New England map shows 36,000 miles of streams plus lakes

The 2 1/2-foot-by-3-foot New Jersey map shows 8,300 miles of streams plus lakes

The 3 1/2-foot-by-2-foot Maryland/Delaware map shows 12,000 miles of streams plus lakes

Manheim Community Farm Show Celebrates 50th Anniversary

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Manheim Community Farm Show celebrated its 50th anniversary this week.

Jay Mylin, director, opened the celebration Monday evening, when hundreds of fair visitors received free servings of anniversary cake.

Completing a year as the Manheim Farm Show Queen, Carla Martin thanked the community for encouraging her to grow and helping her become the person she was meant to be.

Although Manheim Community Farm Show may be little in comparison to some fairs, Carla said, "It is friendly and caring community where teens have opportunities to grow."

Carla, who is also the Lancaster County and the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess, crowned her successor Shelby Haldeman, daughter of Deb and Larry Haldeman.

Shelby and Alicia Geib competed for the crown by answering impromptu questions and through individual interviews with judges.

The coronation event included three junior queen contestants, Katelyn Nolt, Ashley Shearer, and Megan Stankov. Also, included were six princess contestants, Allison Crouse, Michaela Groff, Jennifer Hershey, Jessica Huber, Grace Kensinger, and Samantha Lease. Selected were Katelyn Nolt, junior princess, and Michaela Groff, princess.

The Shepherd's Lead Line showed the crowd the versatility of wool fabric by modeling outfits while leading a lamb or ewe.

Adult division winners were Linda Musser, first; Catherine Shreiner, second; and Julia Stallman, third.

For many years, Linda helped her four children with 4-H sheep projects and with leadline competitions.

"Now it's my turn," Linda said as she led Sally, her son's market lamb. Linda designed and stitched a brown/blue plaid dress of 100 percent wool. The semi-fitted dress with a drop waistline featured a blue denim collar, 19 covered buttons, long sleeves, and a four-gored skirt. Sheep Sally wore a matching scarf.

Linda's son Doug, the only male contestant, led his lamb Cletus for a blue ribbon win in the boys' division. Doug wore a lambs wool sweater vest, wool slacks, and Ivy League wool cap while leading Cletus, who sported a matching tie.

Placing first in the girls' division was Amanda Hershey, 11, from Elizabethtown. She led a Suffolk named Benny. Amanda wore an Austrian 100 percent wool gray cape trimmed in navy blue. Her grandmother helped her make a plaid wool skirt and matching scarf for Benny

Second place in the girls division went to Amber Kiser 13 She wore a 100 percent black wool dress and a herringbone black blazer Her market lamb Oreo wore a wool bowtie

Doug Musser was the only male contestant this year in the Lead Line competition. Doug wore a lambs wool sweater vest, wool slacks, and Ivy League wool cap while leading Cletus, who sported a matching tie. His mother, Linda Musser, placed first in the adult division.

Zimmerman, Donough Siblings Clinch New Holland Sheep Show

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — With 40 breeding sheep and 28 market lambs, New Holland Fair might be considered a small show.

But Clyde Brubaker, Robesonia Hampshire breeder who judged the event recently, said, "Every year I come back the quality gets better and better. The quality shown here makes judging tough."

At the New Holland Fair, Clyde Brubaker, selects supreme breeding sheep champions, a Southdown ram owned by Jimmy Zimmerman, right, and a Southdown ewe as the reserve shown by Jen Zimmerman.

In breeding sheep competition, Brubaker said, "The supreme title must go to the Southdown ram. It's straight, long bodied, and has balance, width, and correctness."

Stroll, the supreme breeding sheep is owned by Jimmy Zimmerman, Reinholds. His sister Jen showed the supreme reserve, a Southdown ewe named Libby.

In addition to the Southdown breeds, other sheep breeds shown were Horned Dorsets with Jen Zimmerman taking champion ewe and ram honors. In the Hampshire division, Jen Hughes took champion ram and ewe honors. In the Romney breed, Jonn-Marie Lauffer showed the champion ram, her sister Alex showed the champion ewe. Andrew Gerhart showed the champion ewe and ram in the Suffolk breed.

Donough siblings from Manheim clinched the market lamb competition. Ryan Donough's champion medium weight lamb was selected grand champion. His sister's champion lightweight was named reserve grand champion.

The Donoughs' lambs are bred and owned. They have been consistent winners throughout county competitions.

4-H: Not Just Animals

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — If your idea of 4-H is that it's all about rabbits, horses, cows, goats, poultry, etc., then a recent trip to the 4-H building at the Harford Fair would have caused you to sit up and take notice.

Fair week is the traditional time for Round-Up, when all the projects that 4-H club members have been working on all summer are brought to the building for judging. This year over 500 projects completed by participants ages 8 to 18 were on display at the Harford Fair.

Tuesday is 4-H Day at the fair when club members and their families visit the building and see what color ribbon they received for their project. There is much excitement generated by the young members who have worked so hard on their projects which range from cake decorating, archery, backpacking, bowling, ceramics, entomology (ick, bugs!), swimming, leadership, theater arts, gardening, fishing, and the list goes on and on.

4-H is a long tradition having celebrated it's 100th anniversary last year. The program is an integral part of our rural communities and provides opportunities for our youth to learn community service, leadership skills, and personal interests.

If you or someone you know is interested in joining 4-H, please contact Penn State Cooperative Extension of Susquehanna County at (717) 278-1158 for a list of clubs and projects

At the Harford Fair, Jeremy Jahnke of the Dimock Community 4-H Club proudly displays his prize-winning 4-H entomology project.

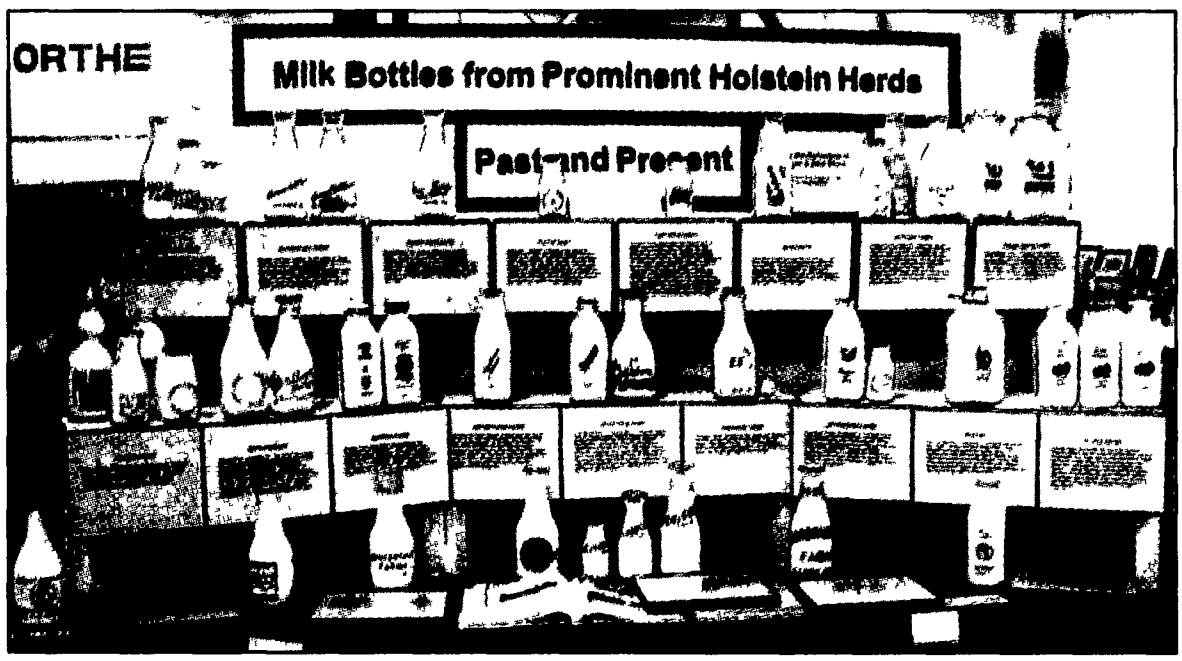
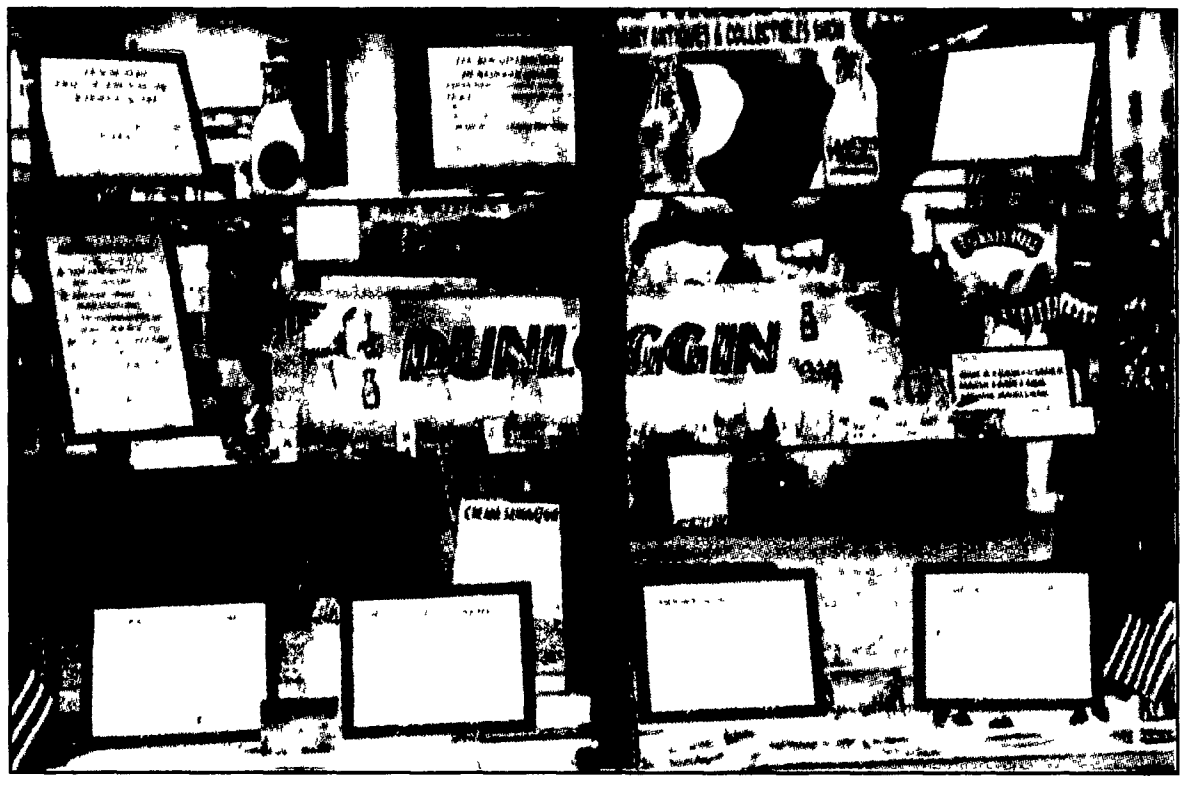
Dairy Antique And Collectables Show Pays Tribute To Dairy History, Celebrates Holstein Breed

One highlight of the Dairy Antiques and Collectables Show is Penn State's life-size Holstein bull and cow models. These models, dating back to 1922, are a rare find. There are only a few schools that still have these models that were issued to prominent "cow colleges" in the 1920's, Penn State being one of them.



The Iager's display includes sets of Dunloggin bottles, including several highly collectable bottles with mistakes, the Life Magazine article covering the dispersal, and other publications on the farm.



Rounding out the Holstein tribute in the Show is Margin and Ellie Stout's display of milk bottles from prominent Holstein herds.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — When one walks into the Dairy Antiques and Collectables Show during All-American at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex, you take a trip back in time to the dairy industry of yesteryear. This year, the sixth for the show, remains as strong as ever, bringing in a variety of amazing and hard to find items for collectors and dairymen to view.

Remaining true to form, this year the Dairy Antique and Collectables show selected a "feature breed," this year's being the ever popular Holstein breed. As in the past, Holstein enthusists did not disappoint, bringing out some of the best history of the breed for display.

One highlight according to Dr. Darvin Braund, chairperson of the Dairy Antiques and Collectables Show is Penn State's life-size Holstein bull and cow models. These models, dating back to 1922 according to Dr. Brawn, are a rare find. There are only a few schools that still have these models that were issued to prominent "cow colleges" in the 1920's, Penn State being one of them.

Braund also noted that these models very rarely leave Penn State's Main Campus and the trip to Harrisburg is a special treat since the only other time they have been placed on display outside of the University was in 1995 for the National Holstein Convention in Pittsburgh.

There are also several 1/16 life-size models on display including a modern day model of the Holstein cow.

Judy and Charles Iager of Fulton, Md. placed several items from their Dunloggin Dairy Collection on display. As noted by Brown, the Iagers are "one of the few people to own a complete set of Dunloggin" bottles and memorabilia.

Dunloggin Dairy, one of the premier Holstein herds in the nation, had their 1943 dispersal sale covered by Life magazine.

The Iager's display includes sets of Dunloggin bottles, including several highly collectable bottles with mistakes, the Life magazine article covering the dispersal, and other publications on the farm.

Rounding out the Holstein tribute in the Show is Margin and Ellie Stout's display of milk bottles from prominent Holstein herds.

Margin Stout of Tunkhannock, Wyoming County has been planning for years on this display, in anticipation of the "Holstein year."

The Stouts are quick to thank Horace Backus, a longtime Holstein breed enthusiast who helped with their display capturing the history of each of 22 farm bottles on display.

While the Holstein breed was the main feature in this year's show, a highlight of the show was a tribute to past All-American Dairy Show grand champions. Pictures were placed on display of the past grand champions for the Ayrshire, Guernsey, Brown Swiss, Holstein, Jersey, and Milking Shorthorn breeds.

The All-American Dairy Antiques and Collectables Show continues to delight the young and young at heart, showing our dairy industry of yesteryear from the great herds that are now just a memory to the technology that has helped to form the American dairy industry of today. It provides a link between our dairy past and present as we continue to look to our future.

Native American Artisans Put New Spin On Old Crafts

Since the 1970s there have been many serious collectors of not only ancient but early 20th century Native American art and crafts. The polished, black, Pueblo pottery of Maria and Julian Martinez, first made in 1919, was widely collected.

Prices continue to go up. However there is growing appreciation and collector interest in contemporary Native American art and crafts. While some is done in the traditional tribal way, many artists are creating new interpretations. Even more important, unlike in the past, there is now name recognition.

Author/collector Dawn Reno has not only put a face on many of these contemporary artisans and their work, but an evaluation in her new book "The Official Price Guide to Native American Art," published by House of Collectibles.

As she recently told me, "Many of today's Native American artists use new media and materials not usually associated with Indian artwork. And, they want to reach beyond cultural barriers and be recognized simply as artists...not just Native American artists."

A surprising fact, cited by Reno, is that "if not for the tourist trade, Native American Art might still be confined to everyday objecs and personal adornment."

It was only after tribes were confined to reservations, did Native American families begin creating works of art that would be passed on to others."

What first attracted Reno to Native American art were baskets and pottery. But, there was little or no imformation about the artists. Basklets for example weren't signed.

While pottery could be identified by tribal techniques and characterics, it wasn't signed.

For example, Acoma, San Ildefonso, Zuni and Hopi mesas still paint deer, birds, flowers, geometric designs and identifiable symbols of their villages onto their pots, new techniques are also used. That led her to seek out contemporary artists and catalogue them as well as list the characteristics of their work.

Potter B,J. Fragua, one of the many artists listed, combines traditional with contemporary techniques. Her pots can be recognized by their white backgrounds as well as painted recessed designs. They are priced in galleries from $250 to more than $1,000.

Another popular category is textiles, blankets, and rugs. When early examples come to auction prices can be hin the thousands of dollars. By their very nature of fragility many have not survived. Best known are those made by the Southwestern Navajos. As Reno points out their rug and blanket weaving is so distinctive that historians hve separated the styles into named periods. Tho other tribes wove it is the Navaho weaver who continues to work, often combining tradional with new inflfuences.

"Most amateur collectors have absoluely no idea of the time and effort it takes to make one small rug or pottery bowl, " said Reno. "The prices or values put on pieces created by native artists often result in their getting paid mere pennies per hour for their work."

CLUES: Most of the Native American artist continue to bring their works to fairs where they sell for a fraction of gallery prices. "If you can contact the artist personally that is your best bet," Reno said. "This way you won't get a factory piece that is a reproduction of a known artist's work. Considered quality pieces as a good investment."

Categories include art, baskets, beadwork, carving, dolls and Kachinas, jewelry, pottery, sculpture, textiles, leather and a relatively new category, sandpainting.

There is a list of galleries and museums representing the artists.

The book, "The Official Price Guide to Native American Art," by Dawn Reno is published by House Of Collectibles, and has so much important information it is a must for any collector.

Information On Black Folk Artists

Can you provide me with any information on a black folk artist known as "The Bride Of Christ" as well as Joseph Yoakum who was another black folk artist? Also, where can I find examples of their work?

Marjorie Clark
Northbrook, IL

The black folk artist to whom you refer is none other than Sister Gertrude Morgan, who was an itinerant street preacher, musician, and gospel singer in Montgomery and Mobile, Ala., as well as in New Orleans.

She was born in Lafayette, Ala. in 1900 and died in 1980. She claimed to be the "bride of the Father and the Christ," and wore only white clothing and surrounded herself with white decor.

She also ran the Everlasting Gospel Mission from her New Orleans home, in which she delivered sermons while seated in a white chair behind a white table.

Sister Getrude told folks that God talked to her and moved her hand to paint religious pictures to be used as gospel messages. Her paintings, which she combined with written text or "teachings," are especially prized by folk art collectors. Sister Gertrude Morgan's paintings measuring more than 12x20-inches are rare, and would be particularly valuable.

Joseph Elmer Yoakum's works were inspired by what he called "the force of a dream."

Yoakum said, "The Lord gave me instructions. My drawings are a spiritual unfoldment."

His drawings were not only a spiritual unfoldment, they were also the touchstone for a long, restless, and adventurous life.

Though he was Black, Yoakum's life began on a Navajo reservation. He married twice, and lived in locations all over America including Missouri, Florida, California and Indiana. Ultimately he settled in Chicago, and at the age of 76, he began to draw at the urging of a compelling dream. Yoakum's work is focused on a remarkable vision of the landscape with fantastic forms to encompass the range and sweep of his imagination. Working with ballpoint pen, and colored pencils, his pictures of great mountains expand and grow, opening up and out, punctured by pockets of trees, forests and rivulets, whereas his later pictures of great seas and oceans he must have traveled on, are wonderfully and magically alive, imbued in a radiant and luminous light.

Another of Yoakum's colorful works is a huge ranch type house amid lush gardens, grasses, flowers, trees, and pretty paths inscribed by Yoakum in black ink at the top titled "The House of Great Joy. Palms Springs, California by Joseph E. Yoakum."

His original art work is on exhibition through November 8, and can be seen in all its colorful glory, at Joseph Yoakum — The Magic and the Wonder of the World exhibit in conjunction with The Intuit Show of Folk and Outsider Art on view at The Carl Hammer Gallery (presented in their second floor gallery space), 740 North Wells Street, Chicago, IL 60610.

You may write for information, or call (312) 266-8512. Or to buy or sell folk or outsider art, e-mail: hammergall@aol.com or visit: www.hammergallery.com.

I must say, visiting Hammer's gallery is an unforgettable experience that'll enrich your life inside, outside, and upside toward the heavens leaving you spellbound.

For more information regarding the spiritual and moving works by Sister Gertrude Morgan and Joseph Yoakum as well as countless works by other outsider artists, check out the book, "Contemporary American Folk Art — A Collector's Guide" by Chuck and Jan Rosenak available in a 320-page edition with color photos of the artworks, and black and white photos of the artists with their biographies, for $29.95 plus $4 postage from Abbeville Press, 488 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10022. Or phone 1(800)-343-4499 toll free to order.

For questions, write Anita Gold, P.O. Box 597401, Chicago, IL 60659. Enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope with a copy of this column and the name of the paper in which it appears for a reply.

Pioneer Showcases Advanced Soybean Conditioning Plant

WAHPETON, N.D. — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc, recently unveiled a $9.5 million upgrade to its soybean production and conditioning facility in Wahpeton, N.D. during an open house at the facility.

This upgrade now allows the plant to produce 24,000 units of seed per day, helping ensure an even more reliable supply of the latest Pioneer(R) brand soybean genetics to growers in the upper Great Plains.

The goal of the upgrade is to expand conditioning facilities to include more soybeans from across the upper Great Plains. To meet this goal, the plant will increase productivity from 1.4 million units per year to more than 2.4 million units.

This year alone, the facility will process seed from more than 70,000 acres of soybeans produced in Richland, Wilkin and surrounding counties. Wahpeton is one of 18 Pioneer soybean-conditioning facilities across the United States.

"The new technology we've incorporated into the plant upgrade allows us to provide even better soybean seed quality to our customers," said Brent Aarestad, plant manager. "We are conditioning additional units per year to more efficiently serve our growing number of customers."

As part of the upgrade, a programmable logistics computer was installed to control the facility's automated operations. To assure product quality, the plant uses specialized equipment such as elevators that gently handle seed and stoners to sort out dirt particles and other foreign objects. Other equipment includes a semi-automatic palletizer and wrapper and an automatic bulk-package fill station.

With more than 50 new soybean varieties introduced since 2000, Pioneer Hi-Bred's worldwide research focuses on creating varieties that have outstanding yields, strong emergence, solid standability, smooth harvesting and disease, pest and herbicide resistance to meet the field-by-field needs of growers.

NEW DIRECTION EQUIPMENT CO

Time Is Money – Get More of Both!
Calculate how many loads of feed you mix per day Multiply that by the minutes it takes for each batch of feed That is how many hours of tractor, mixing and labor you are spending on feeding your cattle per day Consider this. An NDE mixer can mix a batch of feed 10-15 minutes faster than other mixers Calculate your feeding time again using the reduced time of the NDE Mixer. What are you going to do with the time and money you save?

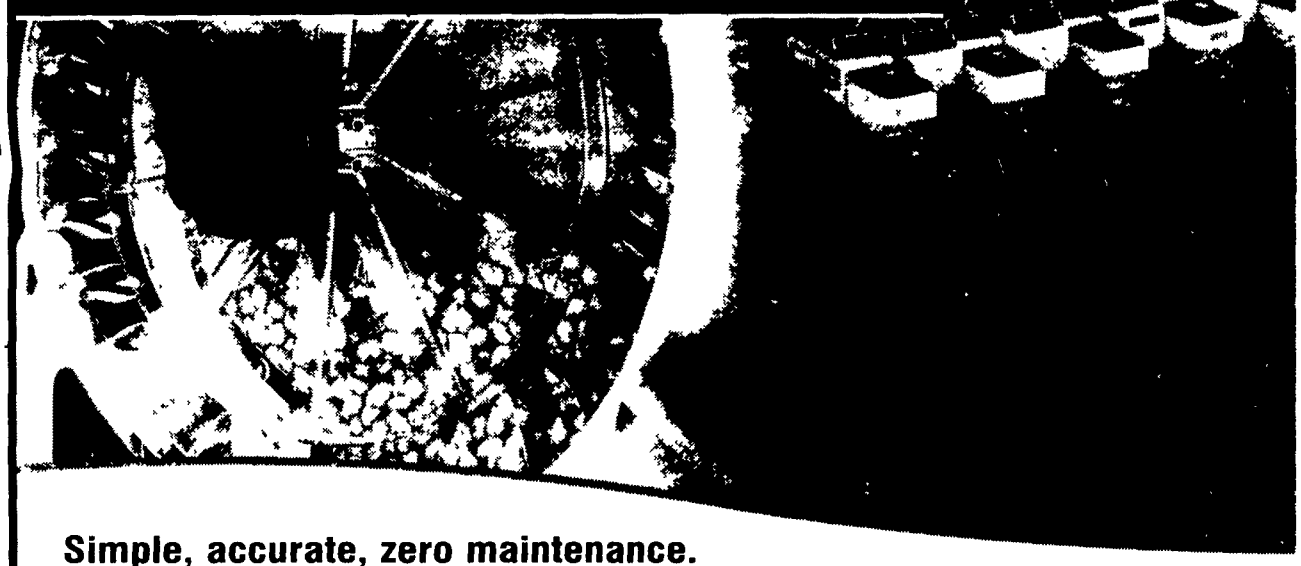
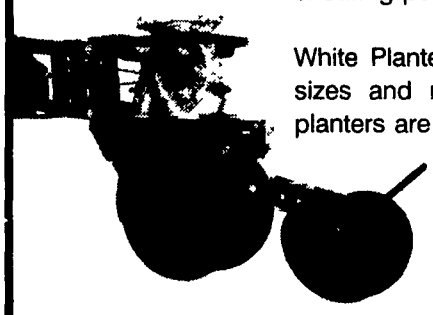
ATTENTION: Planter Owners



Simple, accurate, zero maintenance.

Every White Planter is engineered from the ground up to provide outstanding quality, simplicity, accuracy, gentle handling and visibility of the seed. So, when you purchase a White Planter, if you're required to replace parts in the metering system within the first three years, we'll simply give you the parts at no charge. That's belief in a product and a claim the competition won't make. This represents all of the features a successful farmer demands from a new planter . . . ensuring perfect seed placement across the field.



White Planters are available in a wide variety of sizes and narrow transport widths. And these planters are backed with the superior knowledge, support and service of a White Planter Dealer. Visit your local White Planter Dealer for details.

Meter guarantee applies to 8000 Series Planters Does not include row unit assembly, frames or attachments

- The wagon with the 1 MINUTE DUMP CYCLE*
- Pull a Sunflower/Richardton dump wagon behind a forage chopper to collect and dump forage and haylage into trucks or other receptacles
- Single axle & auto-steer models available
- Positive action roof opener
- Hydraulic system with a cable assist is designed to unload large loads of up to 20,000 lbs quickly and efficiently, even if the load is not distributed evenly
- Smooth interior box sides
- Reinforced box design
- Patented hydraulic lock cylinders lock the box at dumping clearance height for solid, complete and safe dumping
- The diagonal slide system allows truck drivers close access to the dump wagon and reaches out to put loads in the center of the truck box

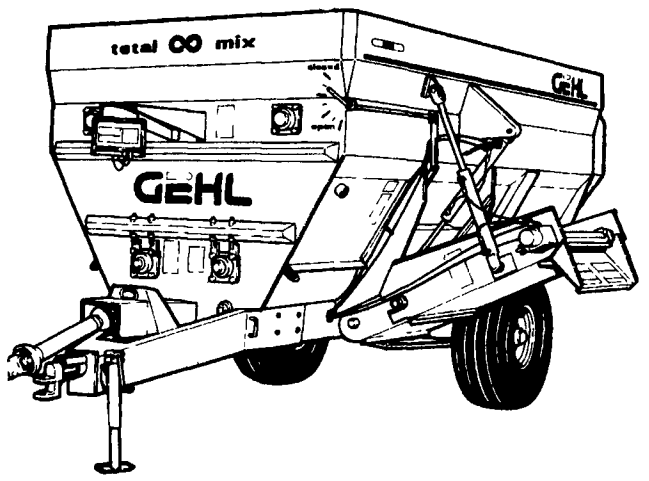
TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration – up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content.

- "Hay-slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers.
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horse power.
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities

One-Of-A-Kind Layer House Ready For Operation In Lancaster County

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Penn Valley Farms, a certified organic farm, operated here by Robert and Lois Keller, is home to a unique layer house.

The house, called a "RED-L" system, brings a new idea to the table for housing layer chickens in a free-range environment. "RED-L" stands for Resting, Eating, Drinking, and Laying. The Keller's house is the first type of this house to be built in North America.

This 328-foot by 48-foot structure will house an estimated 250,000 birds in an organic house situation.

Bob Keller, owner of Penn Valley Farm, said that the opening of this new house marked anew beginning in what has been an eventful year. This new house replaces the original building that was lost in the heavy snows this past winter.

When searching for a house design, the appeal for this unique system came immediately to the Kellers. According to Keller, once he saw pictures of the RED-L system — and as Keller and his family researched the idea — the choice was obvious.

"The more we looked at it," said Keller, "the more we were convinced this was the house of the future for organic farm production."

According to Dave Thompson of Vencomatic, although new to North America, this system has been 10 years in development and use in Europe to meet the demand for an improved free-range layer system.

Thompson notes that the RED-L house has several levels for the layers to move between which allows an operator to increase the layer density in a free-range system. The house also allows for a more animal-friendly environment with places for chickens to perch, reduction in chicken mortality, and is easy to clean.

In addition to the increased free-range chicken population in the houses, the house also features a 100 percent fresh air ventilation system and an automated manure system. The highlight of the manure system is that the manure is stacked in a storage area and air dried. This manure storage system will help to reduce farm odors and aid in fly control in the houses.

Robert Keller thinks as he begins production, he is ahead of a curve in the demand for layers raised in a free-range system. And with this house's benefits, he said, "This system will be the way of the future."

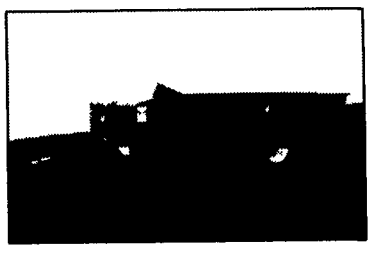
Kuhn Knight Introduces Spreader

BRODHEAD, Wis. — Kuhn Knight, Inc. introduces the new model 8110 ProTwin Slinger.

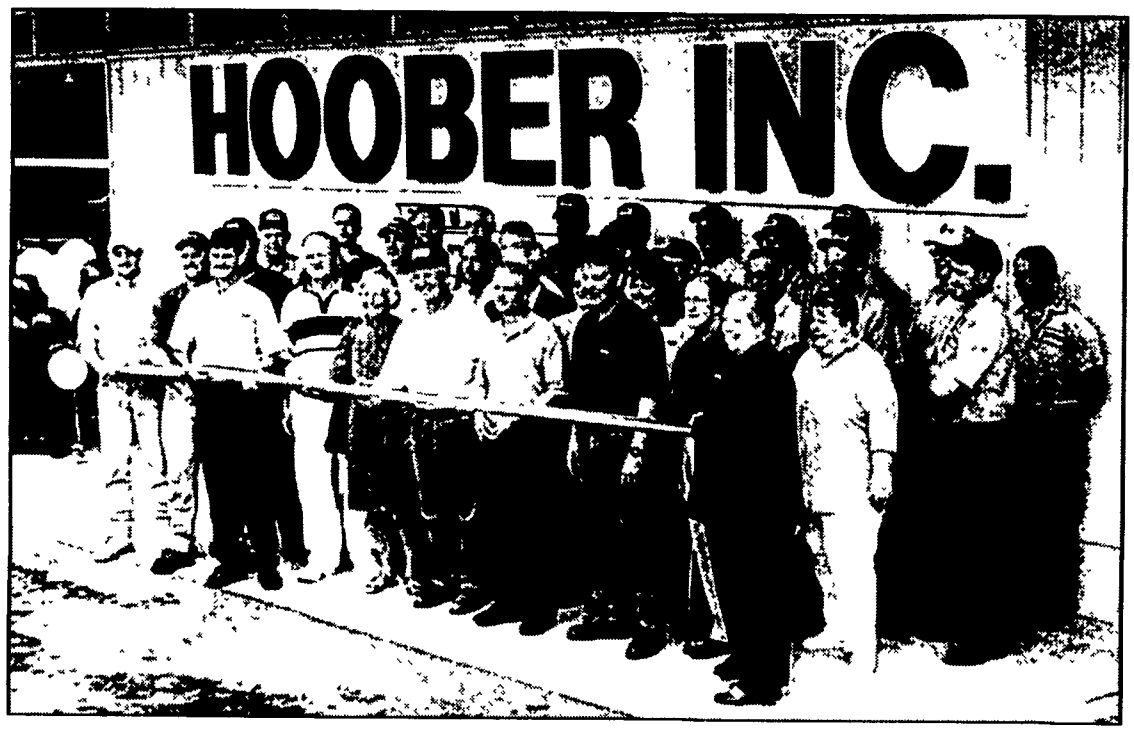
The 1,000-gallon model is available for the smaller producer who wants a superior spread pattern at a box spreader price.

In manure applications, the ProTwin can spread pen pack, semi-solids, slurry, or gutter manure with ease. In bedding applications, the ProTwin has free-swinging forged-steel hammers that evenly distribute all types of bedding, including composted manure, sand, sawdust, wood chips, grain hulls, chopped straw, corn fodder, or any free-flowing material you choose.



The 1,000-gallon model is available for the smaller producer who wants a superior spread pattern at a box spreader price.

ProTwin Slinger sizes range from 1,000 to 4,000 gallons.



Hoober staff and key members of the community were on hand for the ribbon-cutting ceremony at their Seaford location grand opening field day.

Grand Opening Field Day Successful

SEAFORD, Del. — More than 450 people attended Hoober's Seaford location grand opening field day Sept. 4. The farmers in attendance were given the opportunity to discuss new innovations with key manufacturers' product specialists.

There was also a ribbon-cutting ceremony celebrating the first year in business for the Hoober organization in Seaford. According to Seaford store manager Mike Null, "We're so convinced that this is a viable future that we have totally invested our entire business in production agriculture."

It has been just over one year since Hoober Inc. Purchased Tull Brothers and began serving farmers in Seaford and surrounding communities. Renovations to the building were made to better facilitate the needs of the growing business. Most notably, the service shops were expanded. The Seaford store has 34 employees to keep up with customer demand.

"We were very fortunate to start with 10 former Tull Brothers' employees last July and were able to hire a lot of experienced people, which has enabled us to provide the top-notch service that our customers need to get the job done. We have built this business and been successful primarily because of service to the customer. We have 23 people at the Seaford location dedicated to the parts and service end of the business," said Null.

Despite the heavy rains which kept the equipment from operating in the field, there were more than 20 pieces of equipment at the field day, including the brand new Case-IH AFX 8010 Combine, Case-IH Magnum and Steiger tractors, Case-IH Pivot transport planter, Case-IH 4260 Sprayer, Krause Disc Harrows, and the new Great Plains 2200TT Turbo Till vertical tillage machine just to name a few. Many farmers came back for a rescheduled field day on Tuesday, Sept. 9 when the equipment was operating in the field.

One of the big highlights of the day was the introduction of the brand new Case-IH 8010 Axial-Flow Combine by Case-IH product specialists. Some of the key features of the new combine are a 375 HP engine, 330-bushel grain tank, automatic self-leveling grain pan and sieve, 54-inch wide feeder house, and a 3-bushel-per-second unloading rate.

Dan Renaud, product specialist for Case-IH combines, traveled from Kansas to give the introduction of the 8010 combine to Hoober customers. "The biggest feature of the new combine is bringing a higher level of productivity, upward of 40 percent over previous models, to the customer. The technology of this machine is going to increase capacity, allowing you to achieve higher ground speed in adverse conditions without sacrificing grain loss."

The Mill Of Bel Air To Handle Dairyland Seed Products

BEL AIR, Md. — The Mill of Bel Air, Md., recently announced the addition of the Dairyland Seed product line to its offerings.

Built in 1886 along the Ma and Pa railroad, Reckord's Mill was the only industry in Bel Air, Md. until WWII. In 1958, Smith Walter purchased the operation and Bel Air Farm Supply began manufacturing livestock feed. Henry Smith Holloway and his wife Brenda bought the business from Henry's grandfather in 1987.

In 1997, a second location the Holloway's were operating, Churchville Tack and Feed, merged with Bel Air Farm Supply, and the change was marked by an expansion of the retail store as well as a new name, The Mill of Bel Air.

In 2003 the addition of new locations, The Mill of Blackhorse and The Mill of Whiteford, has meant expansion of agricultural products and services to larger customer base. The Mills' employees are committed to providing accurate information and advice to clients with the goal of matching need and product.

The marketing agreement with Dairyland Seed will allow customers of each of The Mill's locations to purchase a complete line of high quality seed products. Included in the Dairyland line up is HYBRI-FORCE 400, the world's first hybrid alfalfa. Yield increases of 8-15 percent are being reported with this patented breeding technology. Also included are their patented Sequential Maturity™ Alfalfa's, grazing alfalfa, and the high yielding varieties of Magnum V and Magnum III Wet.

Taylor Expands Calfskin Business

WYALUSING (Bradford Co.) — Taylor Packing Co., Inc., has acquired the calfskin business of Northeast Hides and Skins, Inc., of Olyphant.

Gary Siegal, who had been the owner and president of Northeast for more than 20 years, has agreed to provide consulting services to help Taylor manage its calfskin business.

With this acquisition, Taylor has become a leading processor of calfskins in the U.S. Taylor also processes cow and steer hides.

"Northeast has been a leader in the calfskin industry, known especially for its quality control," said Mike Coleman, president of Taylor. "We are extremely pleased that Gary Siegal will be a consultant to our organization. Gary brings a wealth of expertise to Taylor."

Coleman said that in his new role, Siegal will be involved primarily with quality control and supplier relations, and will work closely with Taylor's parent company, Excel Corporation, and Excel's manager of hide and offal sales, John Hochstein.

"I am pleased to be involved with the Taylor team and look forward to sourcing calfskins from existing Northeast suppliers and new suppliers," Siegal said. Siegal has been involved in the calfskin and hide business his entire professional career.

During the 1970s and 1980s, he was president of Kaufmann Hides Ltd. in Canada, and later moved to the U.S. to become president of Eden and Strass, Inc., a calfskin processing facility. He then became president of Estra Trading Co., a hide brokerage company.

First-Time Winners Take Home Champion Banners In KILE Angus Show

CHARLENE M. SHUPP
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Several new faces entered the winner's circle at the 2003 Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) Angus Open Breeding Show.

For the grand champion female, judge Bill Conley selected Gambles Famous Lady, owned by Mountain Valley Angus, Lititz and Fred and Tammy Weaver, Ephrata.

Although Mountain Valley Farm has had several past wins at KILE, this was the first time that the Weavers have entered the winner's circle with a KILE championship.

In 2003, "Lady" was also selected as a reserve grand champion at the State Breeder's Show in Huntingdon.

To round off the female champion pair was SLF Ethelda owned by Warren and Brenda Bippert of Aiden, N.Y. as the reserve grand champion female.

Rising to the to top of the Angus bull show was the winning entry, Cedar Hill IMP WWJD, exhibited by Cory Thompson. For Thompson of Wellsville, this continues what has been a banner winning year. His winning junior yearling bull was named the supreme champion at the York Fair and was the 2003 junior grand champion at the State Breeder Show in Huntingdon.

Kreugers 30 Belles of DCC owned by Bill Dean of New Castle was named reserve champion bull.

KILE Posts Results In Junior Market Lamb Show

CHARLENE M. SHUPP
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — About 70 junior market lamb entries were paraded through the sheep ring at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) Sunday afternoon.

Judge Dan Spilde evaluated six classes of high quality market lambs. During the champion selection, he noted that there were several lambs that "carried the traits that he is looking for" in a champion animal and commended the exhibitors for the depth of quality in the show.

Before his announcement of his champion pair, Spilde thanked the show organizers for the oppertunity to judge the show and congratulated the 4-H and FFA exhibitors for a job well done.

When it came down to a final choice, Spilde selected the entry exhibited by Lacey Murray of Garret as the grand champion market lamb. The reserve grand champion market lamb distinction was given to Elle Enos of Rockwood.

The junior market lamb show results are posted as follows:

Programs Scheduled To Update Nutrient Management Regulations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Confused about how current changes in state and federal water and air quality regulations will affect nutrition and manure management strategies on the farm?

Don't miss Dairy and Livestock Nutrient and Environmental Educational Days (NEEDS), a program created to address the regulatory changes and updates that are required in nutrition and manure management to promote improved water and air quality.

The one-day program will be offered at seven sites across Pennsylvania in an effort to educate conservation specialists, producers, agronomists, and feed industry representatives about how these changes will affect them.

The program will be held on these dates in the following counties:

- Oct. 17: Crawford County, Holiday Inn Express, Meadville.
- Oct. 24: Berks County, Berks County Ag Center, Leesport.
- Feb. 13: Dauphin County, Dauphin Ag Service Center, Dauphin.
- Feb. 20: Lycoming County, Lycoming County Extension Office, Montoursville.
- Feb. 27: Somerset County, Oakhurst Tea Room, Somerset.
- March 19: Indiana County, Holiday Inn, Indiana.

Each program will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. The fee to attend is $15 and includes lunch. The registration fee is off set by funding from the PEACCE program.

To register, contact Dairy Alliance at (888) 373-PADA or (814) 865-4682. The registration deadline is one week prior to the event.

DDS Technologies Completes Agreement For Joint Venture with Xethanol Corp.

BOCA RATON, Fla. — DDS Technologies USA, Inc., recently announced it has completed its agreement for a joint venture with Xethanol Corporation, one of the country's largest independent waste/biomass-to-ethnol processors.

Under the terms of the ten-year renewable agreement with Xethanol, the joint venture company, DDS-Xethanol LLC, will combine the proprietary DDS technology with Xethanol's waste-to-ethanol expertise to convert municipal solid waste and other organic waste matters into starch and other valuable co-products. The starch will be converted into fermentable sugar as a feedstock for making ethanol by DDS-Xethanol.

DDS-Xethanol anticipates that a minimum of four machines will initially be required. The project is estimated to generate net operating income of approximately $5 million annually from the sale of ethanol and other valuable co-products.

The initial phase of the project is expected to begin in early 2004 and calls for processing approximately 40 tons of biomass waste per day, per DDS machine in a 20,000 square foot facility co-located at Xethanol's Iowa ethanol plant.

Ethanol is a federally mandated, clean burning and renewable fuel used as an oxygenate in 10 percent gasoline blends under the Clean Air Act and an octane enhancer to improve vehicle performance. It is the closest proxy for gasoline as a gas-extender (gasohol) with nationwide distribution in place.

Ethanol has gained strong political support at State and Federal levels and is critical to U.S. energy security as 23.8 gallons of ethanol can replace one barrel imported oil.

Strong federal action continues to be taken to ban MTBE due to its extreme toxicity, and the number of states banning MTBE is growing. The U.S. Senate recently passed the Omnibus Energy Bill mandating further growth in Ethanol and banning MTBE.

Demand for ethanol has increased from 1.1 billion gallons in 1996 to 1.8 billion gallons in 2001. In 2002, U.S. production exceeded 2.1 billion gallons. Explosive demand growth is projected as ethanol replaces MTBE as primary oxygenate in the U.S. market. The ethanol industry is expected to produce approximately 2.7 billion gallons in 2003, and currently there are over 70 ethanol plants which have the combined capacity to produce 2.9 billion gallons annually with additional plants under construction.

Ben Marcovitch, chairman and CEO of DDS Technologies said, "We believe our technology has significant potential in a broad array of industries. We recognize the opportunity of the waste-to-ethanol market and the importance attached to developing this industry by the Federal Government.

"By aligning DDS with Xethanol, whose core business is processing waste into ethanol, we can achieve our strategic growth goals more efficiently. Xethanol's capability to co-locate a new DDS processing facility within their fully permitted ethanol plant in Iowa gives immediate impetus to this joint venture."

"We are confident that by working closely with Xethanol, DDS will capitalize on the growing market for ethanol as a clean alternative fuel source, and look forward to a very successful and mutually beneficial relationship, Marcovitch said.

Chris d'Arnaud-Taylor, president of Xethanol said, "DDS stands alone as a unique and viable low operating cost recovery and extraction technology. Our newly forged alliance will capitalize on the opportunity to process multiple waste streams into ethanol and other valuable co-products. After the initial phase, we expect to increase our production capacity requirements involving additional DDS units as we penetrate the market for processing other waste streams including municipal solid waste."

What's heat forming?
In metal roofing and siding it's the best way to go! Here is why.
Everlast heats the paint very hot on their Everlast II product before they cut and form it into roofing and siding Tests have proven that heating paint before cutting and bending prevents virtually all microscopic cracks in the paint Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important. Normally manufacturers form and cut at room temperature Unfortunately that cracks the paint causing early rust at formed bends and edges

Metal Roofs aren't Created Equal
Everlast II is better:
- it is galvanized heavier, like old times
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust
- won't scratch as easy paint is harder
- won't bend or buckle as easily, stronger design
- laps are tighter and virtually invisible
- nails/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint
- still priced about the same or less
- picked up or deliver from Lebanon plant

Everlast II is excellent for houses and barns
Standing seam is ideal for houses

You Must Hear what Brad says:

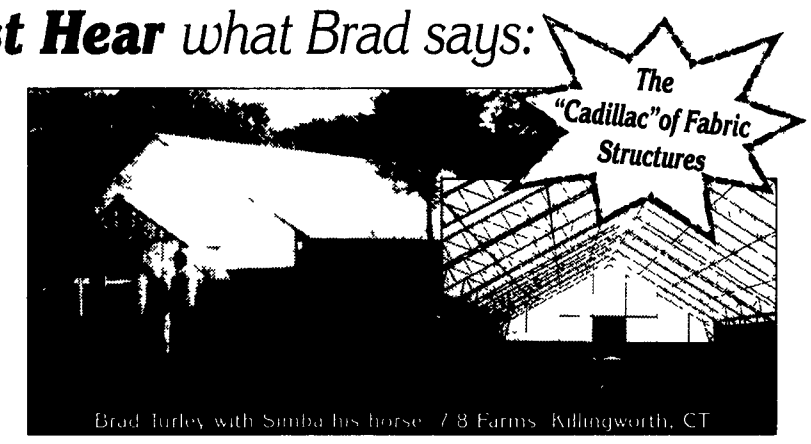
"I couldn't be more pleased with my riding arena!"



Brad Turley with Simba his horse / 8 Farms Killingworth, CT

"I knew what I wanted and I found it! After extensive research I knew I needed a fabric structure from We Cover. The facts that made my decision were:

"The Engineering – when I saw their heavy built trusses and engineered drawings, I knew their building would hold up to the Atlantic Coastal winds and snow.

"The Lighting – I can ride my horse in the natural light with no shadows to spook my horse

"The Design – The Building has straight side walls giving me plenty of clearance for riding The fabric is in 12' panels and each panel is tightened by a ratchet system. Add to the this the convenient overhang and a sensible ventilation system. These excellent features combined with the many options of this building package make it a real winner!

"My local building engineer is so impressed, he says he will never again recommend a traditional building for an indoor riding arena. "I recommend you call We Cover today!"

The strength, integrity, and appearance of a solid building along with the lighting and construction advantages of a fabric structure.

BEEF TIPS
The average US beef cow produces about 610 pounds of beef, an increase of 7% since 1994, and a 40% increase since 1975. The average carcass weight has increased by about 150 pounds in the last 25 years. If you assume 35 million head of cattle are processed annually, the increase in weight alone amounts to 5 25 billion pounds per year

ALFALFA SEED
from the Dakota's Trask Family Seeds
Delivered to Farm • Priced Accordingly
$1.75/lb. Simeon's Store
Orders Booked Now Will Deliver by March 1
- Features grower-to-grower direct seed sales
- S D S U tested and researched
- Varieties S D Common, Vernal and Rhyzoma
- Dakota alfalfas are dormancy rated at "2" and proven to excel in winter hardiness and production[1]
- Trask Seed is American grown and priced to reflect no corporate monopolies[1]

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased."

E. Stoltzfus from Lancaster County has planted a more expensive name brand seed next to Trask Seed and sees no difference.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed

'Old-Fashioned' Just Might Be The Best Fashion

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Sometimes the old fashioned way is the best way.

New technologies come about every day, but shoeing a horse still uses basic concepts from before the 21st century.

Through the Equine Experience at the 2003 Ag Progress Days, horse owners and enthusiasts received a lesson in horse shoeing from long-time farrier Tom Siegenthaler.

In his hour presentation, he explained the detailed process of shoeing Tootsie, an 18-year-old mare, and dished out some advice to horse owners.

A 28-year veteran of the profession, Siegenthaler took a 4-month farrier course at a horse shoeing school in Colorado, but said he only learned the basics.

"A guy told me once that it is all in your head, and only experience will make you a farrier." he said. "I am always learning something new."

Siegenthaler listed three reasons to shoe a horse, with protection number one.

"A lot of times, a horse's foot can't naturally regrow what it wears out fast enough, and a shoe will help protect the foot in that situation," he said.

Horseshoes give the equine traction. Siegenthaler said whether they are jumping fences, pulling a buggy, or riding icy trails,

Healthy Horses Come From Proper Feeding

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) - Horses are just as finicky about their weight as humans.

Want To Ride Trails? Learn To Ride Them Right

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Bud and Gwen Wills enjoy their mules, and they intend to ensure that they are able to continue riding them.

The couple, who live in Clarion County with 22 mules, advocate for horsemen as volunteers for the Pennsylvania Equine Council. They want to keep public lands open to trail riders. To do so they believe they must be easier on the land, be conservationists, ride properly, and teach others to do the same.

They took a class in the mountains of Virgina and now teach other horse riders the "Leave No Trace" method of horse recreation.

At the 2003 Ag Progress Days Equine Experience, the couple shared their experience with the audience. Gwen said they are the only people north of South Caro-

Equine Dentists Get To The Root Of Horses' Problems

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — For most people, the term "floating" may conjure images of clouds, an effortless boat ride down a quiet river, or a feather hovering in the air.

To equine dentists Beth Brown and Kathy Arroyo, however, "floating" means demanding physical labor and long hours in the barn.

In the equine world, "floating" means filing down of sharp edges or protruding teeth — a task performed by Brown and Arroyo, the team of B&B Dentistry and Associates, llc.

The job, however, has rewards.

"We love our job," said Arroyo. "We love the horses and we love making them feel better."

"I wanted a career with horses since I was little," said Brown. After spending 19 years in the nuclear power industry, she took the opportunity to attend a school in New Zealand for a month to learn equine dentistry. She served two apprenticeships and then ventured out on her own after working part-time for more than three years.

Arroyo, an equine body worker, takes care of scheduling, bookkeeping, and helping to calm nervous horses. She also enjoys the chance for her children to come along with her to help with charts, organize tools, and handle the horses. Her husband and children may accompany them on long trips, "so it's a whole family affair," said Arroyo.

The two have teamed up for five years, operating the business from Cochranville but traveling far beyond that area for their work. They take care of the teeth of 80-90 horses a month year-round.

Keeping Things On A Level Plane

Armed with an assortment of "floats" — various curved instruments with carbide blades to take off sharp edges — Brown, who does the dental work, has righted the mouth of hundreds of horses.

For a proper floating job,

Round Pen Training

Use Body Language To Direct, Train The Horse

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Sections Staff

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — "Round pens have become faddish, but it's really nothing that's new," said Karin Glassman, director of Del Val's equine studies program at a recent Summer Ag Ed Conference.

At the event, which was conducted at Delaware Valley College, Glassman presented information about round pen training for conference participants.

"Working horses in a circular pattern traces back to the Renaissance," she said.

According to Glassman, training horses in the round pen builds their physique by improving their suppleness and promotes the horse moving in a regular rhythm.

In addition, "it keeps horses moving — they can't plant their head and neck in a corner and turn their tail to you," she said.

Round pens are typically 50 or 60 feet in diameter.

"You want to think of the round pen as your classroom. It's a great way to educate and observe your horse and address some problems the horse has under saddle by controlling its behavior," she said.

Observing horse behavior outside of training is actually a key in training.

"The alpha horse can control the other horses' movements," said Glassman. For instance, the dominant horses may use threatening body language to warn another horse out of a certain territory.

"So your job in here is to become the alpha horse by directing the horse's movement. In nature, the horse who directs the other's movement is the one who is in charge," she said.

"Horses tend to move away from pressure. If they have the right reaction, remove the pressure. They learn by association — it's a discovery process when horses learn."

A horse's center of gravity — about at the withers — is also the center of balance and motion, according to Glassman.

Pressure behind the line will mobilize the "engine" part of the horse while pressure in front of that line will slow or stop the horse.

Using a coiled lasso or dressage whip as an extension of the arm, Glassman stood near the center of the round pen with the horse on the outside.

By stepping forward toward the back of the horse, she could urge the animal into a walk. Moving closer, or moving with a firm step toward the back of the horse will increase the speed or make the animal's gait faster.

"By standing close to the hip, you send the horse forward. When she moves out, take away the pressure," she said.

Stepping forward, and yet behind the horse's center of gravity will send it foward, according to Glassman.

Conversely, by stepping in front of the horse's center of gravity, Glassman could slow or stop the animal.

"Horses have very good peripheral vision. They've very keen to observe subtle movements in the environment and pick up subtle body language cues.

"Horse communicate by body language, so in training, you have to work on refining your cues. Horses are genetically programmed to see cues."

At the end of the training session, Glassman demonstrated how to let the horse "join up."

"When the horse in the herd has misbehaved, the punishment is sending it out of the herd," she explained.

Therefore, when a horse shows clear signs of submission — or "I want to join your herd," she said — the trainer can stop the workout, let the horse stand, and then walk up to it, a process called joining up.

Signs of submission include pointing the ears toward the trainer ("she's really listening to me now," said Glassman), a lowering of the head and neck, and licking and chewing.

"Stopping the work is the reward," she said.

In summary, "keep the lessons short and interesting. You want to expect little and reward often," she said.

"You want to make sure that they don't get too discouraged. When you're trying to teach them something new, it is helpful to teach them the same way, the same place, and the same time, but not to the point where they get bored and stop paying attention to you."

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Nearly 1,200 of the best American and international show horses will gather at the newly expanded Farm Show Arena in Harrisburg for the 58th annual Pennsylvania National Horse Show, Oct. 9-18.

In addition to competition for nearly a dozen national championships and more than $325,000 in prize money, the show features special attractions including the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the World Famous Budweiser Clydesdales, horse related shopping, equine attractions, children's activities, and more.

The world-renowned Royal Canadian Mounted Police Musical Ride will perform nightly Wednesday through Saturday, Oct. 15-18. The Musical Ride consists of the execution of a variety of intricate figures and cavalry drill performed to music by 32 matched horses and riders. In addition to enjoying the RCMP's coordination, control and timing in the arena, the Mounties welcome visitors in the stabling area between shows.

Another crowd favorite, the World Famous Budweiser Clydesdales will present their eight horse hitch of thundering draft horses nightly, Wednesday through Saturday, Oct. 15-18.

The Pennsylvania National Horse Show is America's largest indoor all-breed horse show. Since its inception in 1945, the event has raised nearly $1.5 million for youth literacy, educational, and recreational programs through the Harrisburg Kiwanis Youth Foundation and the Pennsylvania National Horse Show Foundation.

The event's highlight is the $65,000 Budweiser Grand Prix de Penn National, Saturday night, Oct. 18. These leading riders, who spend nearly a week at the show contesting a number of horses, open each evening session, Tuesday through Saturday, Oct. 14-18, with a jumper class.

The show begins with four days of competition for junior riders under age 18. Eleven national championships are decided at the PNHS. On Sunday, Oct. 12, more than 200 young equestrians ride for hunter equitation's pinnacle, the prestigious USAE/Pessoa National Hunter Seat Equitation Medal Finals. And for the second year, the Pennsylvania National Horse Show will host the 'Good Hands' National Saddle Seat Equitation Championship. The PNHS is also the site of the North American League championships for adult and children's hunters and jumpers, open jumper speed horses, and pony jumpers.

The show also features more than 50 vendors from across the country.

Oct. 9 to 14, general admission is $10 or $5 for seniors and children ages 12 and under. Oct. 15-18, general admission is $15. Tickets are $8 for children and seniors Oct. 15-17. Pennsylvania Horse Power

Pennsylvania Equine Survey Summarized

Dr. Ann M. Swinker
Extension Horse Specialist
Penn State

Editor's note: Pennsylvania Horse Power was developed for promoting and educating people on the size, scope and economic impact of the equine industry in Pennsylvania.

The information found in Pennsylvania Horse Power is a summary of the results found in the "2002 Pennsylvania Equine Survey" in addition to other specific facts noted.

The "2002 Pennsylvania Equine Survey" was conducted the Pennsylvania State University. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, through the State Horse and Harness Racing Commissions, contracted with The Pennsylvania State University to conduct the study.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The equine community is actively preserving open space and maintains the public's connection to agriculture. Over half (56 percent) of Pennsylvania's equine population is housed on properties under 20 acres in size. Twenty-one percent of the equine operations are located on acreages that are less than five acres.

An additional 20 percent of horse farms are located on acreages of 21 to 50 acres in size, 14 percent are located on land tracts over 50 but fewer than 100 acres. *The remaining 11 percent oper*ate facilities on acreages over 100 acres.

Pennsylvania's equine community provides an estimated 1.14 million acres of open space (general population 1,037,153 and racing industry 105,458 acres); horse related tracts of land range from a few acre farmette to thousand acre estates. Equine related land values, for the entire state, were reported to be $4.8 billion.

Racing operations reported that over 10 percent of their equine related acreages were enrolled in Agricultural Preservation programs. Twenty six percent of these racing operations listed pasture as their primary land use, 13 percent of the acreage was planted in crops, and 21 percent was utilized as hay fields.

Whereas, the general equine owners reported that only 8 percent of their equine related acreages were enrolled in Agricultural Preservation programs. Fifteen percent of this general population listed pasture as their primary land use, 17 percent for crops, and 19 percent as hay fields.

Equine-Related Income

Overall, the direct and secondary contributions of the state's equine industry are estimated at more than $1.12 billion in output (the total revenue generated by the industry), of which nearly $615 million is value-added.

However, equine-related income (reported by survey participants) from sales and associated equine/agricultural activities during 2001 totaled $435 million. The racehorse industry reported generating $189 million in income and the general equine population reported income of $246 million.

Equine-Related Expenditures

Equine-related expenditures during 2001 totaled an estimated $746 million. Purchases of feed and bedding accounted for $109 million in expenditures.

Veterinarian and health-related care amounted to nearly $50 million. Taxes accounted for $53.2 million, while $103 million was spent on the purchase of equid, $42 million was spent on boarding horses and nearly $74 million was spent on training costs. (Expenses of commercial racetracks, show facilities and public facilities were not included in these figures.)

Equine-Related Assets

The value of all equine-related assets (excluding commercial racetracks and public facilities) totaled nearly $8.3 billion in 2001. Land was by far the largest asset, valued at $4.8 billion or nearly 58 percent of the total assets reported.

Showing, Competitions

Numerous sanctioned horse shows and unsanctioned events are held each year across the state, with competitions restricted to a particular breed or open to all horses. Many of the thousands of young people who are involved in Pennsylvania 4-H clubs and pony programs have begun a lifetime of involvement with horses.

On most weekends throughout the year, competitors haul their show horses across the state. The average Pennsylvania horse enthusiast attends four shows, events, clinics, and/or workshops per year, one rodeo, and/or one horse race every two years. In 2002 Pennsylvania horse owners reported participating in three shows, events, clinics and/or workshops.

Recreation

Recreational riding and tourism is one of Pennsylvania's larger equine industries. More than 26 percent of the equid are used for recreational activities. Approximately one percent of the state's equid are actively working in the tourism industry. In addition to inner city carriage rides, businesses across the state have offered vacations and outfit hunts on horseback through scenic locations. Some such businesses reported were bed and breakfasts, guest farms and working Amish farms.

Equine Facilities, Venues

In Pennsylvania there are 116 public show/exhibition facilities (farm show facilities, community parks and county fairgrounds) and many privately owned facilities equipped to host horse shows, rodeos, horse racing, and other equine competitions and exhibitions. Of these public facilities, 40 are actively conducting small community open and youth shows; while other facilities offer a venue to handle major national and regional competitions.

In the 2002 show season, eight of the larger county fairs reported conducting large horse shows, one reported horse entries as high as 1,976 head (source: Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs).

According to this report, nearly 1,000 privately owned facilities or stables reported conducting equine events. These numbers do not include the many horse shows held at other facilities across the state, including numerous one-day shows.

Racing

In 2001, Pennsylvania's four race tracks held a total of 762 race days for both harness and Thoroughbred horses.

Over 2.4 million patrons attended the track (1.8 million attendance for Thoroughbred and 597,155 for harness racing) and wagered $941.6 million for Thoroughbred racing and $259.5 million for harness racing.

In total for 2001, the projected horse racing total handle (all wagering at all race tracks) for the state was $1.2 billion. An additional $432 million was wagered during the year on live ($49.8 million) and simulcast races ($383 million). Approximately 80 percent of the money wagered on harness and 76 percent from Thoroughbred racing is returned to the betting public with the remainder distributed among the state (in the form of taxes), purses for the horsemen, and operating costs.

Farm, Ranch Work

The Amish community is a unique part of Pennsylvania's equine industry. Breeding, raising, training and using horses for farm work continues to be necessary. There is still a need for a skilled, usable horse to work in fields and handle special tasks like logging timber, in addition to working cattle.

Rodeos

Due to increasing interest in the cowboy traditions, rodeos are among the horse industry's most popular spectator events, requiring many highly trained horses for a variety of events, from team roping and penning to saddle bronc riding.

In January, Pennsylvania annually hosts one of the largest attended rodeos in the United States. This event attracts 15,000 people and is conducted during the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Other Activities

Pennsylvania is reported to be ranked fifth in United States in number of therapeutic horseback riding programs (according to NAHRA) and is home to the largest therapeutic riders' event on the East coast.

Additionally, Pennsylvania's State Police Mounted unit is one of the superior mounted units in the nation, serving at the inaugurations of many Presidents.

The city of Philadelphia has its own inner-city equine community of police horses, carriage horses, work-to-ride youth programs, and even cowboy units that rodeo. Philadelphia County was reported to house nearly 1,000 horses.

The Fairmont Park System has 100 miles of trails located in the middle of Philadelphia, where equestrians enjoy trail riding. The carriage companies add to Philadelphia's heritage with horses driving through the city streets.

Youth, Education

Horses also are utilized to educate youth and students about the responsibility of caring for a living creature. Pennsylvania is part of the largest Pony Club Regions in the US.

The 4-H Youth Horse Program is considered one of the best in the country.

In Pennsylvania, there are approximately 7,500 youth enrolled in 4-H clubs taking a horse project, 90 National High School Rodeo members, 691 U.S. Pony Club members and hundreds enrolled in specific breed youth associations and FFA.

Horse Owners, Participants

The number of jobs associated with the industry is endless a partial list includes but is not limited to grooms, trainers, veterinarians, farriers, breed organizations, stewards, judges, announcers, publicists, commercial suppliers, tack shop employees, riding apparel designers, sale companies, accountants, saddle and harness makers, transporters and other support industries such as feed and hay producers. Numerous Pennsylvania magazines, newspapers and newsletters are devoted to horses and the equine events.

Clean, fresh, quality drinking water on your farm could make a bigger difference than you think.

Equine Association Seeks Legislation

NICKI LEFEVER
Special Correspondent

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Equine Association wants to ensure protection for the horse industry. They are pushing to pass Bill 896.

Association president Walt Jeffers, along with director Bud Wills, educated horse lovers at the 2003 Ag Progress Days Equine Experience on the importance of passing an equine liability law to protect horse owners in Pennsylvania.

According to Jeffers, the law would state that no equine activity sponsor, activity participant, professional, or any other person including a corporation or partnership shall be liable for an injury or loss to or the death of a participant resulting from inherent risks of equine activities.

Exceptions are stated as a person will be held liable if they are grossly negligent, commit an act or omission that constitutes willful or wanton disregard for the safety of the participant, and that act or omission caused injury, or they intentional injure the participant.

Fourty-four states have similar laws to protect horse owners from being sued. A third of the states have successful laws, a third have unsuccessful laws, and the remainder are uncertain if their laws are working the way they were intended. New York, Pennsylvania, and Maryland are the only eastern states that don't have a law.

"We want to be the 45th state to enact such a law," Jeffers said.

Jeffers and Wills said they are certain it will protect horse owners in the industry as intended and keep them in the state if passed.

The association representatives have seen many horse operations move to state where there is an equine liability law in fear of losing their farm. The operators believe it is important for legislators to realize the potential economic impact horses have.

"There are 40,000 households owning horses, with 210,000 horses. We are fourth in the country in number of horses and we are the fastest growing equine state," he said. "Cows are being replaced with horses."

Jeffers said there are three important things to keep in mind when looking at the proposed law. It is intended to get publicity out that horse activities can be dangerous. Horses are horses — it is not "if" you get hurt around horses, it is a question of "when" and how bad.

Second, riders, drivers, and spectators need to acknowledge these dangers and accept responsibility. Only gross negligence would be exempt from the law.

The bill is in the judiciary committee, where Jeffers and Wills said it needs the most support.

"The committee is made up of lawyers who know that, if this law is passed, (there will be fewer) lawsuits," Wills said. "We need all the support we can get."

The Pennsylvania Equine Association is a nonprofit organization started in 1988 and is committed to promoting the horse industry, educating the public, and ensuring care of animals.

Harness Makers Know The Art Of Using Leather

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Sections Staff

NARVON (Lancaster Co.) — In the show ring, the glossy coats and flashing eyes of high-stepping horses are the eye catchers, however the polished appearance of the teams would not be the same without the impressive trappings of the harnesses that adorn the horses.

The same care that went into preparing the horses for the ring, however, also went into the fabrication of the buckles and straps that constitute a harness.

At Smucker's Harness Shop, Narvon, employees know first-hand the work that goes into assembling a harness from start to finish.

From Hide To Harness

Leather comes to the shop in "sides," or half of a hide from suppliers in Pennsylvania and Missouri. The shipments, which come once or twice a month, bring between 50-100 sides at a time to the shop.

The sides weigh about 25 pounds apiece and are already colored black and different shades of brown.

The hides are all vegetable tanned, a process that takes a week from start to finish.

"That plumps it up — it becomes heavier than the original hide," said Moses Smucker, founder and owner of the shop.

The alternative, a chemical "chrome tan," only takes a day to tan, however the final result lends itself more to shoe production than harnesses.

The shop's sign.

The hides, understandably, vary in quality and size, depending on the animal and even the type of feeding program it was on, according to Smucker.

When it is time for the harnesses to be cut out, "we usually have orders, but in the winter, we make things ahead of time," he said. The most popular harness is a combined driving and pleasure harness.

The hides are cut into strips with draw gauges or machine strap-cutters.

"It's quite an art to use leather," said Smucker. For example, harness makers must keep in mind the thickness of the hide, which varies along each hide. The reins, for instance, are thicker near the bit, where it receives more wear from the hardware near the horse's head.

Additionally, workers must watch for scars and brands on the hide that may render that piece unusable.

"We have to work with the character of each individual hide," he said. "We never know what we're going to get when we open a bundle."

"We use different weights of leather" for the various parts of the harness, according to Smucker's son, Daniel, who also works at the shop. "We don't use the same hide for the whole harness."

Hand Work

Although many pieces are hand-cut, "on the harnesses that we use a lot, we have dyes, which we use to press down to cut" the leather, according to Smucker.

Other jobs that are done by hand include beveling the edges, so the leather is not as sharp. Once the leather is beveled, dye is painted on the side, then a rubbing compound is applied and wiped off.

Hand-stitching — which involves punching a hole in the leather, followed by heavy thread — may also secure part of the harness.

Customers can chose from nine sizes, from miniature horse to draft-horse size.

Decorations are generally limited to the draft horse harnesses, since traditionally the lighter driving horses are harnessed with only a decorative brow band or perhaps a monogram on blinders.

Traditional black harnesses account for approximately 75 percent of the harnesses made at the shop, estimates Daniel. However brown, or russet, is also available. Customers may also order patent leather, a shiny leather made by polyurethane baked on vegetable-tanned leather.

"The Trade Basically Vanished"

Although seeing driving horses in the show ring is a common sight today, the popularity of exhibiting horses and carriages, however, was not always as fashionable.

"For 30 or 40 years, except for basic harnesses, the harness trade basically vanished," said Smucker. From about 1940-1970, "old English-style

(Turn to Page E7)

Harness Makers

harnesses were pretty much lost."

Toward the end of this era, Smucker's father began a shop on the farm, which Smucker moved to a busier road a few years later.

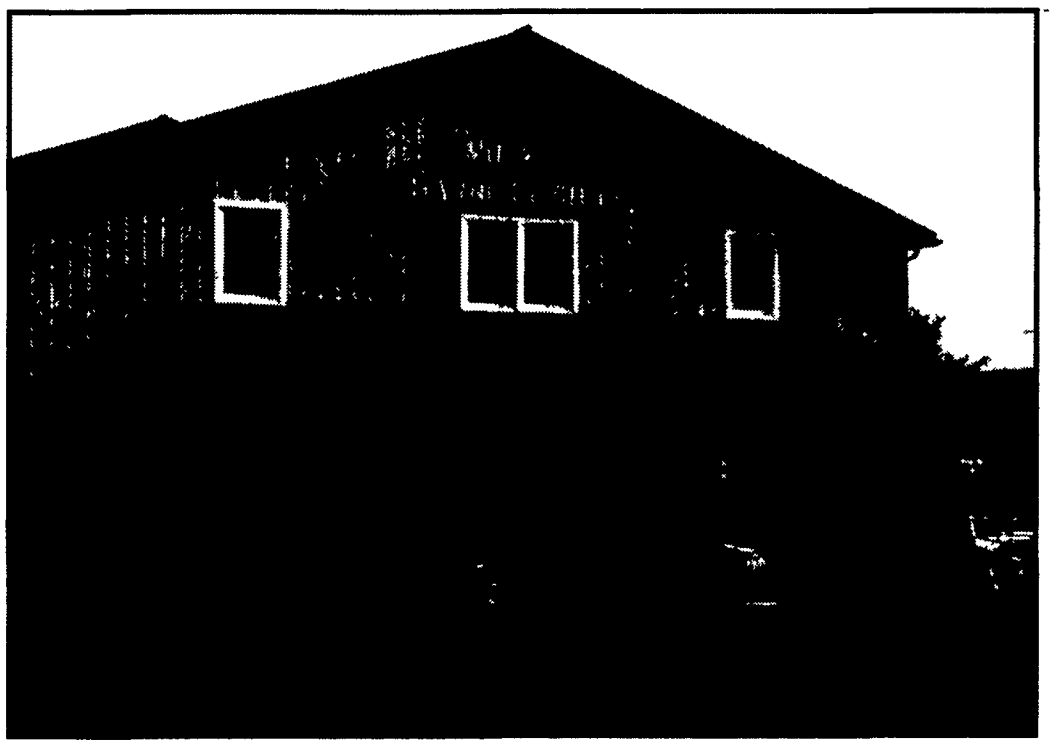
"We used to work on it (making harnesses) on rainy days and wintry days, when we didn't have anything to do on the farm," he said. The local trade was for working harnesses, however the business began to branch out into the more elite harnesses.

"I saw that show driving was coming back again and got interested," said Smucker.

Now, however, "the industry is much bigger" and competition is abundant among harness makers.

The old-style harnesses endure as driving competitions, which are steeped in tradition, dictate that the harness design remain true to history.

"We redesign bits and pieces," but in the driving world major changes in harness designs are not welcomed. "If we would make too many changes they just don't buy it. We can redesign a few things but we don't want to play with it too much," said Smucker.



The store offers an array of equine products, besides harnesses.

To design the harnesses, Smucker attended auctions and purchased old harnesses to serve as templates.

Sales also yielded hardware on a limited basis. When he could not find brass buckles he refurbished nickel-plated pieces for the traditional-looking harnesses, however "now we can buy brass buckles," he said.

The harness designs are not the only part of the business that reaches back into yesteryear. "One of our best machines is probably 100 years old," he said. Other tools include a 100-plus years-old embossing plate.

"Fortunately we can still buy parts for it," said Smucker.

The spot setter machine, which sets the brass decorative "spots" on the harness is also around 100 years old.

"I used to go to Wisconsin or Georgia when old harness shops went out of business, to buy their old materials and bring the equipment home," he said.

Newer machines are used for synthetics. "They are easier to use but will not sew as tightly on leather," he said.

At the end of the assembling process, the black harnesses are dipped in an acrylic finisher for shine and protection. Next the hardware is cleaned, then the entire harness is pieced together.

Get Ready To Wean

Rhonda M. Hoffman, PhD
PAS Research
Assistant Professor
Equine Nutrition
Virginia Tech MARE Center
Middleburg, Va.

Weaning is a necessary process in management of the mare and foal but represents one of the more stressful periods during a foal's life.

During this time, the foal must cope with the emotional stress of being removed from its dam, sometimes combined with the novelty of unfamiliar surroundings and a change in training.

Stress may affect appetite, growth and immune competence, so one of the research goals at the MARE Center has been to determine weaning management practices that help to minimize stress and improve the welfare of foals.

Perhaps some foals have been weaned already this year. Our mares foal in April and May, and we do not usually wean foals until five to seven months of age, which means that weaning for our foals begins in October.

A newborn colt and his dam at the Virginia Tech MARE Center.

The age to wean a foal may be determined by several factors, including but not limited to the following questions: Is the foal healthy? Is the foal growing too fast (wean earlier) or too slow (wean later)? Is the foal too heavy for its age (time to wean)? Is the mare healthy? Is the mare in good condition, or is continuing to nurse the foal an extreme taxation?

We have conducted studies of stress in foals and mares during weaning, which examined behavior, blood hormones, and manure composition. The results of our work have yielded recommendations that are directly applicable to weaning management:

Foals that were acclimated to eating a mixed grain or pelleted concentrate with balanced vitamins and minerals prior to being weaned were less stressed by weaning, compared to those that had pasture and hay only.

Acclimating foals to eat a balanced concentrate as well as quality pasture and/or hay prior to weaning is important to help foals through the weaning transition.

This practice especially helps to maintain body weight, and the balanced vitamins and minerals in the concentrate help to sustain immune competence.

(Turn to Page E13)

lina and east of Indiana to be masters of the program.

"Leave No Trace" started as a hiking criteria, but has evolved into other types of recreation. It teaches guidelines to be easier on the land.

"There are two things you can leave — and they are poop and tracks," Bud said. "But even that you should leave as little as possible."

Leave No Trace: Outdoor Ethics

Plan Ahead and Prepare:

- Know the regulations and special concerns for the area you'll visit.
- Prepare for extreme weather, hazards, and emergencies.
- Schedule your trip to avoid high times of use.
- Visit in small groups. Split larger parties into groups of four to six.
- Repackage food to minimize waste.
- Use a map and a compass to eliminate the use of rock cairns, flagging, or marking paint.

Travel And Camp On Durable Surfaces:

- Durable surfaces include established trails and campsites, rock, gravel, dry grasses, or snow.
- Protect riparian areas by camping at least 200 feet away from lakes and streams.
- Good campsites are found, not made. Altering a site is not necessary.

In popular areas:

- Concentrate on existing trails and campsites.
- Walk single file in the middle of the trail, even when wet or muddy.
- Keep campsites small. Focus activity in areas where vegetation is absent.

In pristine areas:

- Disperse use to prevent the creation of campsites and trails.
- Avoid places where impacts are just beginning.

Dispose Of Waste Properly:

- Pack it in, pack it out. Insect your campsite and rest areas for trash or spilled foods. Pack all trash, leftover food, and litter.
- Deposit human waste into catholes dug 6 to 8 inches deep at least 200 feet from water, camp, and trails. Cover and disguise cathole when finished.
- Pack out toilet paper and hygiene products.
- To wash yourself or your dishes, carry water 200 feet away from streams or lakes and use small amounts of biodegradable soap. Scatter strained dishwater.

Leave What You Find:

- Preserve the past: examine, but do not touch cultural or historic structures and artifacts.
- Leave rocks, plants, and other natural objects as you find them.
- Avoid introducing or transporting non-native species.
- do not build structures, furniture, or dig trenches.

Minimize Campfire Impacts:

- Campfires can cause lasting impacts on the back country. Use a lightweight stove for cooking and enjoy a candle lantern for light.
- Where fires are permitted, use established fire rings, fire pans, or mound fires.
- Keep fires small. Only use sticks from the ground that can be broken by hand.
- Burn all wood and coals to ash, put out campfires completely, then scatter cool ashes.

Respect Wildlife:

- Observe wildlife from a distance. Do not follow or approach them.
- Never feed animals. Feeding wildlife damages their health, alters natural behaviors. and exposes them to predators and other dangers.
- Protect wildlife and your food by storing rations and trash securely.
- Control pets at all time or leave them at home.
- Avoid wildlife during sensitive times: mating, nesting, raising young, or winter.

Be Considerate Of Other Visitors:

- Respect other visitors and protect the quality of their experience.
- Be courteous. Yield to other users on the trail.
- Step to the downhill side of the trail when encountering pack stock.
- Take breaks and camp away from trails and other visitors.
- Let nature's sound prevail. Avoid loud voices and noises.

College Of Ag Sciences Offers Two New Scholarships

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences is offering two new scholarships as part of a program to keep the university accessible to financially needy undergraduates.

The Earl K. and Kay L. Harbaugh Trustee Scholarship and the Arthur W. and Caroline O. Hartman Trustee Scholarship will be awarded to students in the 2003-2004 academic year as part of Penn State's Trustee Scholarship Program.

To support the scholarships, Earl K. and Kay L. Harbaugh have pledged $50,000, and $1 million was endowed from the estate of Caroline O. Hartman. The scholarships will be awarded annually to undergraduate students enrolled or planning to enroll in the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Penn State's new Trustee Scholarship Program is a five-year, $100 million matching scholarship initiative aimed at keeping the university accessible to financially needy undergraduates by raising private support through June 30, 2007. A $50,000 minimum gift, payable over five years, is required. Penn State then will match 5 percent of the original pledged amount annually.

For more information about the Trustee Scholarship Program, contact David Lieb at (814) 863-0694.

the shoes help them keep their footing.

Sometimes horses are born with unbalanced feet. Shoes can help adjust their way of travel or fix a gait to keep them going the right way.

Throughout his demonstration, using old-fashioned methods such as hot shoeing and block and hammer, Siegenthaler gave advice on proper hoof and foot care.

"A lot of horse owners say their horses feet are dry, when that is not the true problem," he said.

Wet conditions cause too much moisture to run through the feet. The foot looks like a rotten piece of wood. People think the foot is dry and put grease or oil on the hoof to remedy it, but that only adds more moisture.

"You don't need to add greasy foot dressing, because it adds insult to injury," he said. "Throw that stuff out."

His demonstration began with walking Tootsie around to see her stance and how he could improve it.

Farrier Tom Siegenthaler shows the proper way to clean and trim Tootsie's foot for maximum comfort.

Then he used his nippers to trim at the toe and worked his way back to the frog and bars to make the foot even and ready for shoeing.

After filing and trimming, he shapes the shoe on his anvil, but only after he gets a good mental picture of the foot. This helps him make less trips to the anvil.

The hot shoe is pressed onto the bottom of the hoof to make a place for the shoe and seal the fibers of the foot.

"This doesn't hurt the foot, but you don't want too many red hot shoes or it will burn too far up the foot," he said.

He solves this by dipping the shoe into a bucket of water to cool down the shoe substantially.

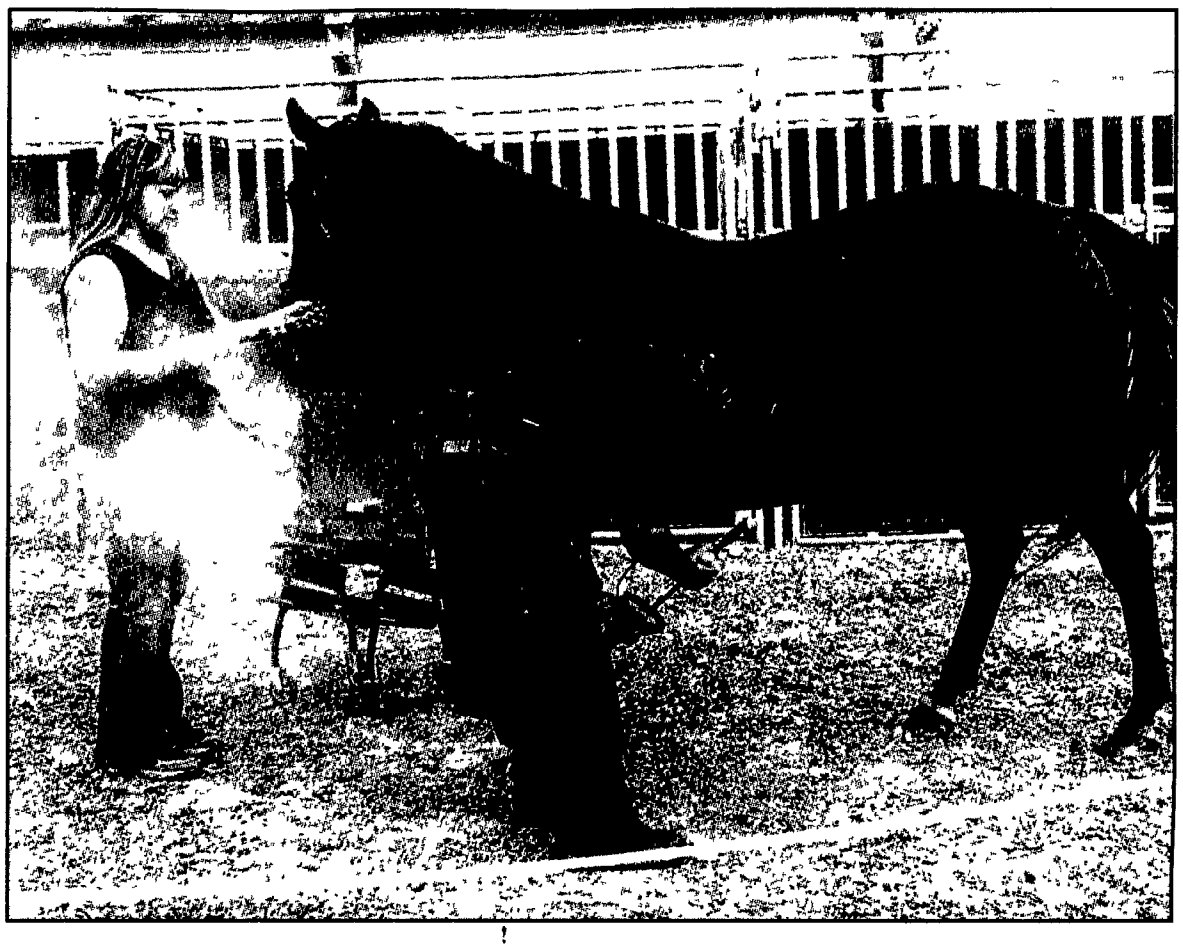
He continues to hammer the shoe on the anvil until he is certain it fits. Then he drives in the nails.

According to Siegenthaler, it is important to position the nails to enter the white line, because pounding them into the hoof wall can compromise the structure of the foot.

Then he smooths the clinches with a block and hammer for a sleek finish.

Siegenthaler said a farrier must shoe seven to eight horses a day to make a living. His business is based in Centre County, but he is known all over the East Coast. He recommends finding a good farrier by calling the American Farrier's Association or by word of mouth.

"A good rule is to look at a group he has put shoes on," he said. "If the majority of the horses are sound a majority of the time, then you have yourself a competent farrier."



The horse's foot is made up of several important parts necessary for proper function.

Proper Feeding

"They don't like me talking about their weight," Young said.

All jokes aside, proper nutrition for any equine is very important.

"It is important to maintain proper body weight with a total balanced diet of energy, protein, vitamins, and minerals," she said.

With tools provided by Purina, Young told the audience exactly how to do it.

To determine the correct diet one must know the age, weight, activity level, and body condition score of the horse.

Purina has a body weight tape to assist in weighing and calculating horse activity level and lifestyle for classification: maintenance, light work, moderate work, heavy work, show conditioning, broodmare, stallion, or growing. It is important not to overestimate the horse's activity level.

Body condition scoring is a method developed in the '70s and '80s by Texas A&M University. On a scale of one to nine, one being poor and emaciated and nine being extremely fat, the scorekeeper should feel the horse in six regions. Feel along the neck, along the withers, crease down the back, tailhead, ribs, and behind the shoulder.

Young said to take an average of the six parts to get the overall score. Just like people, horses carry their weight in different areas. The ideal body condition score is five to seven.

The next step is to use one of four formulas: National Research Council: Nutrient Requirements of Horses book, feed tag and product feeding recommendations, determining calorie requirements versus calories provided per day, or specific feed recommendation chart.

The formulas and corresponding charts can be obtained from any feed company representative.

Young said once you determine how much to feed the horse, it is important to remember a 3-pound coffee can holds different weights of different foods. It holds 5½ pounds of corn and anywhere from 2½ to 4½ pounds of oats.

She recommends buying the Purina food scoop which is labeled for different feeds or buying a fish scale and weighing the food in a garbage bag.

Young said horses use calories as energy, like people do. Just as it would take more lettuce than Oreos to fulfill a daily allowance of calories for a human, the same goes for horse food.

"If a horse has too much energy, it is important to check their diet. It might be to high in starch, sugar, or calories," she said.

Brown must make sure the horse's arcades (four rows of molars — two upper/two lower) are balanced, in occlusion, and the lower jaw moves freely.

Since peering into the mouth of even a cooperative horse is a challenge, she does much of her work "by sound and feel." As she does the work, she listens for the sound of a toothy edge diminishing to a level plane and occasionally checks progress with her hand.

The job is not an easy one, as a horse's teeth are not readily accessible. Different angles of floats (one dubbed the "molar roller") allow Brown to file down all the teeth that a horse's mouth harbors.

"The very last upper molars often get sharp edges and I use a slender float that will slide in between the tooth and the horse's cheek," she said.

As she finishes she makes sure that "the horse still has enough grind," she said. She gently pulls the horse's lower jaw back and forth horizontally to make sure that the jaw is moving freely and that there are no remaining sharp edges.

If the horse's jaw does not move naturally, "I'll go back in, because there's something in there, little niches that are not letting it go," she said.

"Ninety nine percent of my work is done by hand," she said. "I use power tools very sparingly, due to the concern of overfloating," she said.

However "if you get something big that must be reduced, it's not fair to stand there for two hours trying to do it by hand. It also takes a lot of elbow grease."

If a horse has serious dental problems, Brown may sedate the horse to use the power tools after consulting with the client's veterinarian.

As she faces an Arabian with a large "step" in the back of the lower jaw (the teeth have worn into a dramatic, stepped-like appearance), she decides on power tools to file down the aging horse's teeth.

"If a horse cooperates and it's a maintenance float, not a corrective float, it's about 30 minutes," said Brown.

The horse's teeth should be fairly even. "It's a three-point balanced system: the TMJ (joint connecting the jaw to the head), the molars, and the incisors," she said.

"If the incisors hit and the molars can't, I have to reduce the incisors," she said.

Hopefully there is "enough tooth" to allow Brown to balance the horse's mouth by reducing the incisors.

If not, "we put them on equine senior beet pulp mash" until the teeth grow to the level that they can be satisfactorily floated.

"Help Them Out

"All domestic horses need their teeth done because eating hay and processed grains, they don't eat the roughage they were designed to eat, so we have to help them out," Brown said.

"If the horse's teeth are out of alignment, their body will be out of alignment," said Arroyo.

"It's no different than if your neck hurts, you're going to be stiff through your neck and shoulders," said Arroyo. "Horses will compensate to protect until something else hurts."

Horses should have their teeth floated "every six months from approximately one to 14 years old," said Arroyo, "because their teeth are physically softer and erupt from the gum faster than an older hose. This results in sharp edges developing faster on a young horse.

"You want to follow a floating schedule that fits your horse," she said. "A maintenance float takes approximately 20-30 minutes and the horse is done. A correction float can easily take an hour to complete, which can irritate even the kindest horse."

"I like to see horses when they're yearlings," said Brown. "Their wolf teeth should be through so they're easier to remove. It's not like these babies need major dental work, but a light float will knock down rough edges and introduce them to floating."

"Horses older than 14 years may only require floating once a year, due to denser teeth and a slower eruption rate. However, each horse is an individual and must be treated that way," said Brown.

If the teeth have not been floated, horse owners may notice that the animal is dropping food out of its mouth and losing weight. They may also ball up hay and spit it out, since they can't chew it correctly — called "quiding," according to Brown.

Other Tasks

Although floating constitutes most of their work, they may also be called upon to perform such tasks as removing "wolf teeth," a small shallow-rooted tooth located in front of the molars, usually in the upper jaw.

A normal occurrence in horses, most wolf teeth are removed before the horse starts training with the bit, usually around one year old. The tooth is not well secured and can hurt the horse when a rider introduces a bit.

Another assignment may be to clip the canine, or "fighting teeth," according to Brown, which can get long in male horses.

Not only could this pose a threat to other horses, but also "the bit can hit the canines as the bridle is being put on or removed and the horse may get to the point where it won't want the bit in its mouth," she said.

If the horse is prone to putting up a struggle, the client's veterinarian may administer a sedative. This helps to relax the animal.

To steady the animal, Brown and Arroyo set up a stand for the horse to rest its head upon.

"We set the head rest for the height of the horse, not the dentist," said Brown. The animal, its head resting quietly on the stand, may pinch a nerve in the neck as the horse relaxes if the stand is adjusted too high.

Beth Brown works at removing "Buddy's" wolf tooth, a small tooth located in front of the molar that could cause problems with a bit. The tooth is usually removed when the horse is a yearling.

However, 95 percent of their work is done without having the horses sedated.

The teeth of young horses, said Brown, are generally easy to remove, "it's when they get older that they get a little harder — they get more embedded," she said.

Since Brown often finds her hand and forearm deep inside of her patient's mouth, the "speculum" is "used to hold their mouths open so that all their teeth can be examined completely and safely," said Arroyo. "They can't bite with this on."

On The Road

According to Arroyo, the pair travels to and stables throughout Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, and Delaware.

Arroyo records what treatment each horse received for both their own and the owner's records. They use the records to remind them of problems from before, and make sure nothing new developed since the last visit, she said.

Besides issuing the paperwork and bills, Arroyo takes care of the cell phone, scheduling their 70-80 hour work weeks and helps hold and calm the horses during the floating process.

The Importance Of Proper Dental Care For Your Horse

Beth Brown
Equine Dental Technician

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — During the course of their lives, horses experience constant changes in their mouths. Their teeth change in growth rate, size and shape as the horse ages.

This is why proper dental care is so important. When a horse's mouth is comfortable, he chews efficiently, maintains his weight and is more willing to accept the bit.

If a horse is experiencing pain, his attention will be on himself, trying to get away from the pain and not on the person working with him.

From birth to the age of five years, a horse loses its baby teeth and the permanent teeth erupt into occlusion (coming into contact with the cusps of the opposing teeth fitting together). This is a very critical time period for the horse. At the same time he is being trained to ride and drive, his mouth is constantly changing.

One problem is the eruption of Wolf Teeth (located on both sides of the upper jaw, just in front of the molars where the bit rests), which appear between five and eight months of age.

The bit can hit these small teeth when the reins are checked, causing moderate to severe pain. In an attempt to escape from this pain, a horse may grab the bit, toss his head up in the air, bolt, and refuse to turn or rear up.

It is imperative to have wolf teeth removed prior to placing a bit in the horse's mouth. Effective training requires trust. If the horse feels pain as soon as you start, the whole training process may be a bad experience for both of you.

Young horses also shed deciduous (baby) teeth. These "caps" must fall out or are removed at the proper times, to allow the permanent teeth to move into place. If a cap fails to shed, (is retained or stuck) several things can happen:

1) A permanent tooth may erupt next to the cap, which creates a misalignment

2) A cap may stick up higher then the rest of the arcade, which creates a painful pressure point every time the horse goes to chew.

3) The permanent teeth will continue to erupt and if a cap is retained, excessive forces can cause the roots of the tooth to extend into the sinuses or into the lower jawbone.

These situations can cause a horse severe pain and a trainer major frustration.

Ages five to fifteen years, the adult horse has a full set of permanent teeth. His teeth continue to erupt and the natural chewing action of the horse wears his teeth down.

This chewing action creates sharp edges on the cheek-side of the upper teeth and the tongue-side of the lower teeth. These edges must be filed and smoothed down to maintain the effective chewing action, which ensures: proper utilization of grain and hay, easier acceptance of the bit, a better attitude toward working and being trained.

Horses in the age range of two to fifteen years should have their teeth checked by a qualified equine dental technician every six months, due to the eruption rate and density of their teeth.

After 15 years, the eruption rate slows down and the teeth get physically more dense, therefore, a visit by the dentist once a year should be sufficient.

Keep in mind, each horse must be treated as an individual. These ages can be used as a guideline, but not as an absolute.

Proper dental care is one aspect of equine care that often gets overlooked.

An owner should not wait until there is an obvious problem: weight loss, dropping feed, or head tossing and resisting. Having your horse's teeth floated and balanced should be routine maintenance, not just for problem correction.

Get Ready To Wean

Foals weaned in familiar surroundings fared better than those moved to new locations.

Foals weaned in stalls were less stressed if they had a stall to themselves than if they were paired in a stall with another foal. Former beliefs were that "misery loves company," and the paired foals would comfort each other.

Rather, newly weaned foals that were housed together in stalls antagonized each other constantly.

Foals were more stressed when weaned in groups where all mares were removed at once, compared to foals weaned in groups where only a few mares were removed at a time.

The supplementation of probiotics (bacterial cultures thought to promote digestive tract health) did not ease or worsen foal stress during weaning.

At the MARE Center, our method is to wean our foals in the pastures where they have been housed with their dams.

We wean over a period of several days, removing 1 or 2 mares from the group every other day. We leave one mare remaining with the foals as a "babysitter" for approximately two months after weaning.

The babysitter appears to have a calming effect on the weaned foals and seems to help keep them in the daily pattern of eating, coming to water, transitioning from pasture to hay in the winter, etc.

We do not change the management of the foals or begin any new training for at least two weeks after weaning. In this manner, the foals remain in familiar surroundings among their social group and do not have to cope with new management or training situations until they have completed the weaning process.

Foals grazing fall pasture at the MARE Center are in good condition and ready to be weaned.

USDA Publishes Agricultural Internet Marketing Guide

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA announced the release of a new publication designed to assist agricultural producers in marketing their products via the Internet. "How To Direct Market Farm Products On the Internet" provides basic information to farm direct marketers who are interested in selling their products online or using a Website to publicize their farm or products.

"For agricultural producers, the Internet can help solve problems of time, distance, and location in marketing their products," said A.J. Yates, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. "We are working to provide the tools to help level the playing field for agriculture and rural communities by providing technological solutions and technological support."

Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman also announced that USDA will expand efforts to bring farmers, rural residents, and businesses greater access to improved telecommunication technology through the financing of more than $1.4 billion in loan and loan guarantees to rural telecommunications providers.

The number of Internet users shopping online has skyrocketed in recent years. Of the estimated 168 million Internet users 16 years of age and older in the U.S., approximately half say they shop online. Because of this rapidly growing trend, many farm direct marketers are turning to online marketing to increase their customer base. The publication addresses issues to be considered before adopting the Web as a marketing tool, as well as tips on how to research the Internet market, set up a Website, and market products on the Web. References, largely from the Internet itself, are cited to enable producers to undertake additional research.

"How To Direct Market Farm Products On the Internet" is available in print and on the Internet at www.ams.usda.gov/tmd/MSB/msb.htm. For more information or to obtain a copy of the publication, contact Errol Bragg, USDA AMS TMP MSB, Room 2646 S, Stop 0269, 1400 Independence Ave., SW, Washington, DC 20250; (202) 720 8317, fax: (202) 690 0031, or e-mail Errol.Bragg@usda.gov.

Housing And Fencing For Horses

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Shelter for most horses should furnish protection from hot sun, wind or stormy weather.

The type of shelter depends on the facilities available to each owner. This varies from a three-sided loafing shed in the pasture to a barn with box stalls and tack room. The stable need not be fancy, but it should be well-constructed for safety and arranged well so it can be kept clean.

Listed below are some standard dimensions.

Space Requirements:

- Box stall: 10 feet x 10 feet to 12 feet x 12 feet
- Tie stall: 5 feet x 12 feet including manger
- Ceiling height: 8 feet minimum
- Doors: 4 feet wide x 8 feet high
- Hay manger: 28 inches side, 38 inches high top edge
- Grain box: 24 inches to 30 inches long, 8 inches to 10 inches deep, 38 inches to 42 inches from floor to top edge.

Your stable or shelter may not fit the above dimensions exactly. Be certain there is room and plenty of light and ventilation with no drafts. The horse should have access to water at all times, cattle automatic waterers or buckets.

Arrange the grain box so your horse cannot get its hoof in the box and so the box can be cleaned easily. The hay manger should be constructed with an open space at the bottom for chaff, dirt and trash to fall out or so that it can be cleaned easily.

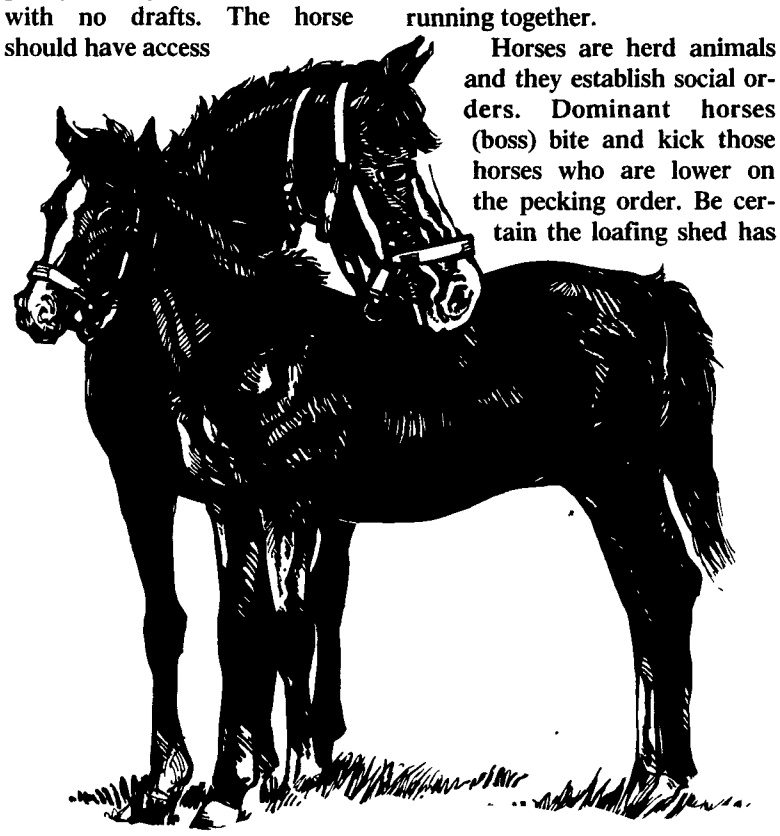
Do not feed hay or grain on the ground because the horse will pick up dirt and sand with the hay. This will cause colic.

Water buckets should be hung high enough so your horse cannot get its hoof in the bucket.

If you board your horse, there are three options: stabled (box stall) paddock and pasture board. Find out if the boarding stable provides turn-out for stabled horses. If you pay full board, the boarding stable should provide feed, cleaning and turn-out.

Partial board arrangements vary, so check out what all is included with your boarding arrangements.

If your horse is kept in a corral, paddock or pasture with a loafing shed, it is important that the shed and corral have enough room for the number of horses running together.



Horses are herd animals and they establish social orders. Dominant horses (boss) bite and kick those horses who are lower on the pecking order. Be certain the loafing shed has enough room so the horses can dodge and get out of the way, without being tromped by the dominant horse, preventing injuries.

Regardless of where you keep your horse, always be alert for loose boards, nails and any projections that could cause injuries. Keep all wire and hay-bale twine picked up so horses don't eat it, which causes health problems.

Fencing

Fencing can be constructed of poles, boards, plastic (PVC) or wire. The important thing is that the fence be visible to the horse to keep them from running through the fence. Wire fence should be smooth not barbed wire. Barbed wire injures horses.

Electric fences should have smooth wire. Check with a fence-checker to be sure it works.

Most electric charges have a light that shows when there is a break in the fence or if the circuit is incomplete. Remove overgrown weeds from fence lines. Check all fences regularly and keep wire fences tight.

Disposal Or Composting Manure

Develop a plan for manure disposal or use. Start a project to convert manure and yard waste into a useful product for gardening and landscape. Composted manure returns needed nutrients back into the soil. See Cooperative Extension Service action fact sheets on composting horse manure.

USDA Provides $333.7 Million Funding To Improve Electric Systems In 15 States

WASHINGTON, D.C.— USDA Under Secretary Thomas C. Dorr last week announced the awarding of $333.7 million in loans and loan guarantees to 15 states.

These funds will be used to make needed improvements to local electric and telecommunication systems and will help spur the economic recovery in rural America.

Dorr said. "This investment in rural electric and telecommunication infrastructure creates job opportunities and provides services that improve the quality of life for local residents."

According to USDA statistics, 23 jobs are created for every $1 million of Federal investment in electric infrastructure. The loans being awarded today could help create 7,675 jobs in rural areas across these 15 states.

"The funds will be used to serve 50,906 new customers, build 3,650 miles of new distribution lines and cable and make other improvements to existing electric and telephone systems," Dorr said.

The following is a complete list of approved project dollars by state:

Alabama - $21,126,000; Georgia - $130,320,000; Kansas - $7,502,000; Missouri - $42,786,000; Minnesota — $3,964,000; Oregon - $4,536,000; South Carolina - $78,152,000; South Dakota — $1,196,000; Virginia- $10,500,000; Wisconsin - $11,587,000; Multi-State Coverage - $22,190,000 (Colorado, Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wyoming).

Funds are provided from the USDA Rural Development electric and telephone programs. USDA Rural Development's mission is to deliver programs in a way that will support increasing economic opportunity and improve the quality of life of rural residents.

Further information on rural programs is available at a local USDA Rural Development office or by visiting USDA's web site at www.rurdev.usda.gov.

Alfred College Veterinary Technology Program Accredited

ALFRED, N.Y. — The veterinary technology program at Alfred State College has been granted full accreditation by the American Veterinary Medical Association Committee on Veterinary Technician Education.

The program had been granted provisional accreditation two years ago. Provisional accreditation, by definition, is given to new programs that meet or exceed most — but not all — minimum requirements and/or have not produced graduates. The programs remain on provisional accreditation until achieving full accreditation or for a period not to exceed five years.

"Our goal at the time we were granted provisional accreditation was to get fully accredited within three years. We accomplished that goal," said Dr. Melvin C. Chambliss, DVM, title and chair of the Agriculture and Horticulture Department where the program resides.

Alfred State College, a member of the technology college sector within the State University of New York (SUNY) system, is located in Alfred, N.Y., 15 miles north of the Pennsylvania border, 75 miles south of Rochester, and 90 miles southeast of Buffalo.

USDA Reallocates Nearly $60 Million For Conservation

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently announced the reallocation of nearly $58.6 million to be used for conservation technical and financial assistance.

The reallocated funds come from unused funds previously distributed to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service state offices, national level reserves, and the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) "performance holdback," as called for in the EQIP final rule. This performance incentive is money held back at the national level to be awarded to states that achieve a high level of program efficiency and optimize environmental benefits. Eight states received an EQIP performance incentive due to efficiency demonstrated: Arkansas, California, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Carolina and Texas.

This redistribution will help additional producers get the conservation benefits that come from conservation planning and voluntary conservation programs, such as EQIP, Wildlife Habitat Incentives Program, Farm and Ranch Lands Protection Program and Conservation Reserve Program.

Following is a list of area states reallocated funding: Connecticut $1,730,693; Delaware $1,727,504; Kentucky $1,036,410; Maine $1,676,347; Maryland $1,360,949; Massachusetts $1,131,526; New Hampshire $1,773,473; New Jersey $1,009,050; New York $1,113,839; North Carolina $1,423,461; Ohio $2,290,666; Pennsylvania $1,730,644; Rhode Island $1,259,515; South Carolina $1,712,975; Tennessee $528,400; Vermont $1,364,024; Virginia $691,748; and West Virginia $483,692.

FSA Begins Pilot Program For New Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Farm Service Agency of the USDA has begun a new pilot program of federal guarantees for contract sales of farmland from retiring to beginning farmers.

The Beginning Farmer and Rancher Land Contract Guarantee Pilot Program was contained within the 2002 Farm bill and is now available in six pilot states. Championed by the Center for Rural Affairs, the Midwest Sustainable Agriculture Working Group and the Sustainable Agriculture Coalition during the farm bill process, the proposal received sponsorship from Senators Tom Harkin (D-IA) and Richard Lugar (R-IN).

Traci Bruckner, federal policy analyst with the Center for Rural Affairs, said commencement of the program marks a positive result of the farm bill process.

"What began with the understanding that retiring farmers naturally want to help young people enter farming, is now fully realized in a program that enables just that," said Bruckner. "When we're talking about the source of a retiring farmer's lifetime's income, putting it even potentially at risk is a huge deterrent. The federal guarantee of payment removes that deterrent and replaces it with new opportunity for young farmers and ranchers."

The six states specified by USDA for this pilot include Indiana, Iowa, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin. The program will provide the guarantees for five loans per year per state made by private sellers for contract land sales to beginning farmers and ranchers.

Additional information on the pilot program can be found at your local Farm Service Agency office, or check online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov. Also, contact Traci Bruckner at the Center for Rural Affairs, (402) 846-5428, or tracib@cfra.org.

Fall Harvest At Pepperbox Set For Oct. 25

LAUREL, Del. — The only event on the Delmarva Peninsula featuring real horsepower at work is set for Saturday, Oct. 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The event is sponsored by the Delmarva Driving Club, Inc.

Visitors may choose to ride with members providing the horsedrawn shuttles from the parking area to the event site, where they can see field work done by horses, observe a portable sawmill in operation, help make and taste fresh apple cider, ride a horse or in a wagon, pet some farm animals, or just reminisce with friends about "how it used to be done, in the old days."

Hosted by Ed and Lois Evans on their farm east of Laurel, near Trap Pond in the tiny area locally known as Pepperbox, the event draws draft horse farmers and collectors of farm equipment, classic and antique cars, trucks, tractors, engines along with other memorabilia.

Ongoing exhibitions will include an operating portable sawmill, basket weaving, wool spinning, chair caning, blacksmithing, and woodcarving. An encampment of Civil War reenactors, primarily from the 46th Virginia Infantry, Company F, will be demonstrating living history. Vendors will be set up and will offer their varied wares — ceramics, paintings, jewelry, woodcrafts, baskets, tack, embroidery, candles, jams — all will be on display and available for sale.

The carriage museum, an old kitchen, chicken coop, harness and tool sheds will be open to visitors. Live music will add to the festivities throughout the day. To wrap up the day, a parade at 2:30 p.m. will showcase the horses and antique machinery.

The Delmarva Driving Club was founded in 1983 to keep the skills of driving horses alive, and strives to be a link between transportation and farming methods used a hundred years ago and today's sport of driving horses. Club members and friends not actively involved with the various horse-oriented activities during the day offer coffee and scrapple sandwiches for early arrivals, plus a wide selection of items for sale, including homemade chili, vegetable soup, fried chicken platters, baked goods, and ice cream.

For more information or to register as an exhibitor or vendor, call (302) 875-4971. The Delmarva Driving Club invites families and old-timers alike to join in the fun at Fall Harvest at Pepperbox east of Trap Pond, just south of Rt. 24.

USDA Expands Pilot Internet Payment System

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman last week announced that USDA is expanding its pilot e-LDP program to 50 counties, with every state having one participating county. The service, which allows producers to request and receive loan deficiency payments (LDPs) online, has been available as a pilot program in 21 counties since May 2002.

"This program saves America's farmers and ranchers time, energy and money, and it is an example of how USDA is harnessing the power of the Internet to better serve producers," said Veneman. "The pilot program is part of the Administration's e-Government initiative, the government-wide effort to use technology to better serve individuals and businesses across the country."

The program allows producers to apply for and receive LDPs online from remote locations such as their homes or offices. Participating farmers no longer have to travel to USDA Service Centers to receive their benefits. As a result, the program reduces paperwork load and speeds up payment processing.

The 29 new counties in which the pilot program is being implemented are: Cherokee County, Ala.; Delta County, Alaska; Pinal County, Ariz.; Glenn County, Calif.; Adams County, Colo.; Windham County, Conn.; Sussex County, Del.; Calhoun County, Fla.; Mitchell County, Ga.; Honolulu County, Hawaii; Latah County, Idaho; Waldo County, Maine; Harford County, Md.; Hampshire County, Mass.; Montgomery County, Miss.; Humboldt County, Nev.; Coos County, N.H.; Burlington County, N.J.; Dona Ana County, N.M.; Monroe County, N.Y.; Gilliam County, Ore.; Washington County, R.I.; Sumter County, S.C.; Box Elder County, Utah; Caledonia County, Vt.; Westmoreland County, Va.; Whitman County, Wash.; Mason County, W.Va.; and Goshen County, Wyo.

Participation in the pilot e-LDP program is limited to producers in the selected counties. The length of the pilot is yet to be determined. For more information on the pilot e-LDP service or other USDA programs, contact the USDA Service Center nearest you or your local FSA county office.

10 States To Get Funds For Ag Innovation Centers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — $10 million in grants to establish agricultural innovation centers in 10 states has been awarded by the USDA as part of the Bush Administration's ongoing effort to assist rural businesses, farmers and ranchers in developing value-added businesses through greater utilization of production agriculture commodities.

The 2002 Farm Bill created the program to provide technical and business development assistance to increase and improve the ability of agricultural producers to develop markets and processes for value-added agricultural commodities and products.

The following is a list of the recipients selected for funding: Michigan State University $ 999,860; Montana State University $1,000,000; Cornell University, New York $ 993,200; Agricultural Utilization Research Institute, Minnesota $1,000,000; Iowa Department of Agriculture and Land Stewardship $1,000,000; Commonwealth of Pennsylvania $ 996,935; Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey $1,000,000; Kansas Department of Commerce $1,000,000; Purdue University, Indiana $1,000,000; and North Dakota Association of Rural Electric Cooperatives $1,000,000.

"These centers will give rural businesses, farmers and ranchers a new resource to help them create new markets for their commodities," said Agricultural Under Secretary for Rural Development Thomas C. Dorr.

Taylors Dominate KILE Shire Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) —Tom Taylor of Oswego, NY, and his uncle, Rob Taylor of Lisle, NY, dominated the National Shire Show at the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition (KILE) at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. Although their high-quality Shires are housed on separate farms, their shared brilliance in both preparation and exhibition technique are apparent.

The Taylors shared top placings in both the Senior and Junior Champion Mare competitions. Tom Taylor's Caerberllan Diamond was named Junior and Grand Champion Mare (Caerberllan Diamond was the first of Tom's entries to win a Grand Champion award, but one of many to take home class champion placings). Reserve Grand Champion Mare was given to Tom's Skelton Sophie, who was also named Senior Champion Mare. Rob Taylor's Hillmoor Hannah took home the Senior Champion Mare award.

In all, Tom Taylor won eight ribbons, while Rob Taylor received four during the National Shire Show. Showing Shires at KILE has become a tradition for Tom over the past four years. He also exhibits his horses at approximately 10 competitions per year, including the New York State Fair and other state and regional fairs.

Although the Taylors do much of their own breeding, both the Grand Champion and Reserve Grand Champion Mares (Caerberllan Diamond and Skelton Shophie) were imported from England.

Sign-Up Begins For USDA's 2004 DCP Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Enrollment for the USDA's 2004 Direct and Counter-cyclical Program (DCP) was set to begin Oct. 1.

Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman said, "Oct. 1 begins the second year of successful implementation of the 2002 Farm Bill." Producers must sign contracts annually under the DCP, which is a change from Production Flexibility Contract requirements under previous farm legislation.

Producers have until June 1, 2004, to enroll for the 2004 DCP. Late-filed applications will be accepted through Sept. 30, 2004, if accompanied by a $100 late fee. Producers can opt out of participating in the program any year if they choose. For both the 2002 and 2003, more than 98 percent of the eligible base acres were enrolled.

By the end of October 2003, producers will have received some $8 billion in DCP payments for the 2002 crops and the direct and the first advance counter-cyclical payments (if any) for the 2003 crops. For all years, refunds to USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) will be due if there is a violation of eligibility requirements or, in the case of counter-cyclical payments, if the advance payments exceed the final payment rate.

Grassland Reserve Program Offers Funds For Working Lands

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The national Grassland Reserve Program (GRP) offers funds to farmers and ranchers who maintain working grasslands. The 2002 Farm Bill amended the Food Security Act of 1985 to include authorization for this program.

Nationwide sign-up for the program began on June 30. Natural Resources Conservation Service officials in Pennsylvania are helping to coordinate and promote the program in the state.

Jana Malot, NRCS natural resources specialist in Pennsylvania, recently gave an overview of the program during Ag Progress Days.

"We're not paying you to stop using land," Malot said. "We're paying you to keep using land in a very wise manner."

Among others benefits, the GRP offers funds to graziers and hay producers for doing a good job maintaining working grasslands.

"Grasslands provide critical ecological benefits and play a key role in environmental quality, as well as contributing to the economies of many rural areas," said U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman. "This voluntary program helps protect valuable grasslands from conversion to other land uses, thus helping to ensure this national resource is available to future generations."

Grasslands make up the largest land cover on America's private lands. Privately-owned grasslands and shrublands cover more than 525 million acres in the U.S. For the first time, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will direct financial resources and technical expertise to help landowners protect and restore these lands.

Applications for participation will be accepted on a continuous basis at local USDA service centers. Once funding has been exhausted, eligible applicants will remain on file until additional funding becomes available. Veneman previously announced that $49.9 million in fiscal year 2003 funds are available to implement GRP.

The Natural Resources Conservation Service, Farm Service Agency and Forest Service are coordinating implementation of GRP, which helps landowners restore and protect grassland, rangeland, pastureland, shrubland and certain other lands and provides assistance for rehabilitating grasslands. The program will conserve vulnerable grasslands from conversion to cropland or other uses and conserve valuable grasslands by helping maintain viable ranching operations.

When properly managed, grasslands and shrublands can result in cleaner water supplies, healthier riparian areas and reduced sediment loadings in streams and other water bodies. These lands are vital for the production of forage for domestic livestock and provide forage and habitat for maintaining healthy wildlife populations. These lands also improve the aesthetic character of the landscape, provide scenic vistas and open space, provide for recreational activities and protect the soil from water and wind erosion.

GRP offers producers several enrollment options: permanent easements, 30-year easements, rental agreements (10, 15, 20 or 30-year duration) and restoration agreements. For permanent easements, USDA makes a payment based on the fair market value of the property less the grazing value. For 30-year easements, USDA pays 30 percent of what would be paid for a permanent easement. For rental agreements, USDA pays 75 percent of the grazing value in annual payments for the length of the agreement.

For restoration agreements, USDA pays up to 90 percent of the restoration costs on grassland and shrubland that has never been cultivated and not more than 75 percent on restored grassland and shrubland (land that once was cultivated).

To participate in GRP, offers must be private land that includes at least 40 contiguous acres. Additional eligibility criteria are described in the "Notice of Availability of Program Funds for the Grassland Reserve Program" that was published in the Federal Register on June 13, 2003, and is available on the NRCS Web site listed below. This notice applies only to fiscal year 2003 funds and will be used for the initial sign-up.

For more information about GRP and other conservation programs, contact your local USDA Service Center, listed in the telephone book under U.S. Department of Agriculture, or online at http://offices.usda.gov/. Information, including Federal Register notices and rules, also is available at http://www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/farmbill/2002.

How To Feed Pasturing Horses

Robert M. Jordan
Professor Emeritus
Department of Animal Science
University of Minnesota

Pasture forage has virtually the same nutrient composition on a 90 percent dry matter basis as hay. Two differences exist — grass doesn't contain 90 percent dry matter (usually only 20-35 percent dry matter), and grazing permits a horse to eat only the most palatable, and usually the most nutritious, part of the plant.

Can a horse, grazing a good pasture, consume enough to meet its nutrient requirements for:

• Maintenance? Yes. In fact, mature horses can get fat on grass, and yearlings and 2-year-olds will make appreciable weight gains.

• Gestation? Yes. Grass is usually a laxative feed that's high in protein and vitamins. Pasture provides an ideal environment for foaling mares.

• Lactation? Many mares may actually gain weight while lactating. However, as the season advances, the amount and quality of forage begin to decline. Under those circumstances, the mare will lose weight while her foal will gain, but at a slower rate.

If the lactating mare is to be rebred, a loss in body weight may result in lack of estrus (heat) and/or ovulation. For big, active and heavy-milking mares (Thoroughbreds, American Saddlebreds, etc.) 4 to 8 pounds of grain per head daily may be fed to maintain weight until the mare has conceived.

• Work? Whether pasture will meet the requirements for work depends on the quality of pasture and how much the horse is ridden. Riding increases the energy requirements, over maintenance, by 35 to 200 percent, depending on how long and at what speed the horse is ridden. Feeding 2 to 6 pounds of grain per day, in addition to pasture, usually maintains weight and stamina.

What's the best pasture forage? Orchardgrass, reed canarygrass, and bromegrass are about equal. These species provide good forage early in the season, form a good sod, and are very palatable and nutritious. Timothy and bluegrass don't produce as much forage and become dormant and unpalatable earlier in the summer.

Reed canarygrass is a heavy producer. However, the variety of reed canarygrass is very important. It should be a low-alkaloid type. The old varieties become high in alkaloids by midsummer and become very unpalatable. Keep in mind all cool-season forages cease to produce during the warm and dry weather ot July and August.

• Legumes? Alfalfa and clovers contribute nitrogen to the grasses, lengthen the growing season, and increase the protein and mineral content. However, if grazed continuously or grazed in the fall, they will be killed out in about one year.

"The Engineering - when I saw their heavy built trusses and engineered drawings, I knew their building would hold up to the Atlantic Coastal winds and snow They also provided everything my local engineer needed to approve the building

"The Design – The building is designed like a building should be! It has straight side walls giving me plenty of clearance for riding It also has over hang which gets the water out away from the foundations and building The fabric is in 12' panels and each panel is tightened by a ratchet system

"The Ventilation – The side curtains and the height of this building aid in plenty of fresh air Also the fabric reflects the heat, keeping it cool in the summer

"The Options – They built me a viewing room on the end of the building so that visitors can watch the riding and yet be out of the way! It also adds to the total appearance

'My local building engineer is so impressed, he says he will never again recommend a traditional building for an indoor riding arena
